FRED. KURTZ AND HIS "REPORTER."

On reading the first editorial in last weeks Reporter we thought to ourselves, is Fred Kurtz caving into Meek's vices and fibbing and cringing to cover his flings against Meek from behind the ambuscade of J. S. Black and the Pittsburg Post of "Give us honest men for the Legislature." We should not be surprised to see Fred show the white feather. This week he is becoming frightened at his home thrusts at Meek and because we published some of them in the REPUBLICAN and showed that he intended and pointed them at Meek, which he says "is all right and proper on the part of our Radical neighbor" but attempts to chide us for not denouncing dishonest individuals in our own party. He declares that we never said one word about Evans and Hodges. Fred's memory is bad or he did not read the REPUBLICAN, for we did refer to Evans as an alledged embezzler, but stated at the same time that he (Evans) denied the charge of embezzlement and claimed a set off to the amount retained.

Evans was arrested, brought before Judge Pearson—a Judge whose nomination the Democrats of Dauphin county endorsed and to whom they gave their whole vote—this same Judge discharged Evans from the criminal charge. We also stated that Hodges had been arrested and confessed his guilt, &c. We said all we could say. All we had room to say. All that was necessary for us to say. We were sorry for Hodges, as we always are for Meek or any other man who gets into trouble. We condemn no man without a hearing. We make no charges against any man which we cannot prove. We said enough about Hodges. Now what are the facts? What does the case of Hodges prove? First; that he is a Democrat and always voted that ticket, and, Second; that Grant is not the tyrant Fred Kurtz and the Democratic press of the county strive to make him, or he would have removed Hodges long before he could have embezzled money, upon the grounds that he was a Democrat and should not hold office under a Republican administration. President Grant did not remove him on account of his politics; but so soon as he found that he (Hodges) was practicing the old tricks which he had learned in the Democratic party, and was stealing from the Government, he had him arrested, tried and punished. Fred, why do you play the hypocrite?

All these things we stated and might have re-iterated; but we had stealings enough about home to demand our time and space. The Court House thieves and their defaulting collectors, demanded our attention. We felt it a duty, imposed upon us to "ventilate" the financial affairs of our own county. While we were doing this, Fred, you know that you were dumb and kept your readers in the dark. What have you ever said about the defaulting collectors of Centre county? What have you ever said in regard to these men putting the peoples money into their own pockets and keeping it there? For years you have published the Auditors' Report, showing that these defaulting collectors have nearly $50,000 of the peoples money in their pockets, when the county was in debt and its guardians—the County Commissioners—had to borrow money and pay from 10 to 12 per cent. interest to pay the currant expenses of the county and in addition to this, raise the county taxes to SIX MILLS on the dollar.

Where was Fred Kurtz, then, and where is he now, on that subject? Why so partial to home peculators? If you are honest Fred, why not tell the whole truth? Why not expose the manner in which the Court House Ring is skinning, not only the Democratic; but all the tax-payers of the county? Bah! There is no heart, no honesty in you!

Again; Fred says, "the Reporter and the whole Democratic press of the county expose and denounce the Tammany thieves." Here Fred is dreaming, we will use no harsher term, When did the Watchman denounce the Tammany thieves? And have the Reporter or Watchman exposed and denounced Guernsey the Democratic editor of the Williamsport Standard, whose bail had to pay over $20,000 for his embezzlement of the United States money as collector of internal Revenue for this district?

No! Fred, will not see the embezzlement committed by his Democratic friends in this Congressional District. Nor will he refer to the embezzlement of the Chairman of the Democratic County Executive Committee. But to show our readers and the tax payers of Centre county the truth of what we insert and at the same time the dishonesty of Fred Kurtz and P. G. Meek, we insert the following advertisement signed by Wm. Furey, Clerk of the County Commissioners:

LAST NOTICE!—Notice is hereby given to all collectors of county and State taxes in Centre county, who have not settled up their duplicates for the years previous to 1871, to come in and settle said duplicates and make payment of balances due, on or before the twenty-seventh day of November next, or said balance will be placed in the hands of an attorney, with instructions to collect the same without delay, as no longer indulgence can be given; nor, after that date, will any percentages or exonerations be allowed. By order of Commissioners

WM. FUREY, Clerk.

October 25, 1871.

It is all gammon, and Fred knows it, to refer to the Democracy of New York. Did they not elect "Boss Tweed" the chief of "the Tammany thieves" by 12,000 majority? What does Fred say to this act of the honest democracy of New York? Does he denounce it? Never one word; but by passing it over approves of this Democratic victory. This is indeed, a bad commentary on his professions, and heartless cry of "Give us honest men for office."

But it appears that Fred is only playing pe-po, with Meek, for in the next column we find Fred notices "a political forger" in a certain Cyrus Omstead whom he says was an independent candidate for the Legislature in the Fifth District of New York, and apparently surprised, ironically declares, "We are not used to these things down here in good, old, honest Pennsylvania, and we trust that hereafter forgeries can for the Legislature will stop now." Stop now, running political forgers for the Legislature here in Centre county in "good old honest Pennsylvania!" Who does Fred mean? He almost names the man, for he says, "really electing forgers to the Legislature betrays a sad and dangerous state of morals among the people who encourage such characters with their votes at the primary elections for no nition."

Fred having Meek's forgery of the Lytle-Chambers letter before his eyes, which, said letter, was exhibited at the primary elections, to slaughter Jno. H. Orvis, Esq., as he (Kurtz) had done D. G Bush, Esq, the fall previous, with misrepresentations, meant and intended his remarks for Meek, who resorted to the forgery of the Lytle-Chambers letter to secure his nomination to the Legislature. Kurtz meant Meek and no other person. This is clear. Deny it Fred, if we have not stated the case fairly. You meant it, did you not Fred? Speak out. Do not be afraid of Meek? Tell your Democratic friends that he is the man you mean, as he is the only political forger that has been successful lately.

TWENTY-ONE States have voted this year. These are New Hampshire, Connecticut, Kentucky, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Ohio, California, Iowa, West Virginia, New York, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Kansas, Mississippi, New Jersey, Texas, Virginia and Maine. All but six went Republican, and two of these six (New Jersey and New Hampshire) will be easily won back next year. Conceding them to the opposition, however, and leaving out all the other States which have not voted, the Republicans have already more than a majority of the Electoral College. This is a nice calculation for the Democrats to base their Presidential speculations upon.

The Future—Gloomy Prospect For Democracy.

The Selma (Ala.) Times, of Oct. 12th, writing while yet the smoke of battle had scarcely cleared away in the Buckeye and Keyston States says:

"Our defeat in Pennsylvania and Ohio we fear, but presages disaster in the Presidential struggle in 1872; and unless we believe the Democracy will learn wisdom from recent defeats, and remove the causes of them, we should abandon all hopes and prepare ourselves for the rule, for the next four years, of the nominee of the Radical party, whether it is Grant or Greeley.

NEW YORK REDEEMED.—New York State has been revolutionized. The anti-Orange riots and the Tammany exposure have been too much for the people. The Republicans carry the State by over 20,000.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

The political party called the Democracy, has had a career that for a period of years previous to 1861, was a succession of triumphs. This was owing to the principles it enunciated in its early history: "The Union must, and shall be preserved," thundering from the compressed lips of that old warrior and statesman, Andrew Jackson, reverberated in the hearts of the people of this young Republic, even to this present day—"Equal and exact justice to all men" blazoned on the banners of the Democracy, aroused the sympathies of the good people, not alone of this country and this hemisphere, but in every clime where oppression was felt.

Had these principles been adhered to, there would have been no Republican party to-day. There is no Republican who would not have been a Democrat, for it is ideas and sympathies that rule the world, not names or signs—names and signs grow old; but truth and justice are eternal.

That banner, with its dazzling scroll "Equal and exact justice to all men," has fallen from the hands of the Democratic party. The slave power of the rebellious South substituted themselves its standard-bearers. They obliterated its beauty, and dropped it in the dust because it was incompatible with the infamy of human bondage, whose supporters and agents they were. Leaving it there, the black flag of lust and rapine was raised in its stead, defying Heaven and man with the motto, that "a black man had no rights which a white man was bound to respect." From sublime truth to the most extravagant iniquity; from the loftiest pinnacle of fame a beacon-light to the world, to the darkness of the deepest guilt of injustice and wrong.

Republicanism has come to the rescue of liberty. It has raised the standard from the dust. It has maintained it against its foes, and conquered them. It has unshackled the slave; and still protects him from injustice. It has welded the Union indissolubly. It has triumphed over every foe to justice, humanity, and peace, and still its great destiny is unaccomplished. It must secure to posterity the results of its sacrifices and its labors. Secure "Equal and exact justice to all men." Secure the honor of the nation by paying its just debts, and enforce respect for the laws.

The citizens of the United States are entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness on every square foot of its territory; and when one shall, at New Orleans as well as at New York or Boston, receive no injury for opinion sake; when the operations of the Courts are unthreatened in the South; and when to invoke the law, there will be a sufficient protection, the Republican party will have effected somewhat of the mission that sprung it into existence. When peace rules supreme, then, and not till then, can it afford to rest from its labors and congratulate itself upon its history and its triumphs.

This change from right to wrong, from principle to policy has been going on for many years. Slowly, imperceptibly, but surely, in the Democratic party; and it is nothing surprising to find some of its votaries still held captive by the attractions of its youth, and some who hope that it's early splendor will be revived. Vain hope! the Democracy passed away in the tumult of the battles of Gettysburg and Nashville with it's train of Slavery and Rebellion; it's Confederacy, it's Generals, it's traitors and it's fools. Nor is it to be wondered at that the more distant people of older and less inlightened countries venerate the Democratic party. They show only the bright pages of its history, those fetted with the blood of the noblest of the land are sedulously kept out of their view.

The foreigner landing upon these kindly shores, flying from oppression, from the angry eye of a tyrant master, with weary but hopeful heart, susceptible, and anxious to participate in the hospitalities afforded by our generous laws, finds, after setting foot in our streets wherever he turns his eyes, the glorious mottoes of Liberty and Union invariably displayed and coupled with the name Democracy. On the gorgeous campaign banners, bar-room walls, glaring post-bills, every where it shines forth in lying splendor. This is the secret of the success of that wily party in gaining accession to its ranks from the foreign element. How false are such representations. That political party has forfeited the right to even admire what it pretends to foster. This duplicity practiced upon foreigners is its only vitality. Enlighten these people on the history of the last ten years. Tell them that the Democracy while pretending to love the Union, have deluged the land with the best blood of the people in an attempt to erect a separate government, a monarchy perhaps, below the line of the Blue ridge. Tell them, that, while it preaches liberty and toleration, its members are ready with their lives to uphold human bondage, and that their toleration means the assassins' midnight dagger, yes, day or night, wherever it can be used with impunity.

But also say that this odious institution of slavery has been abolished, despite every effort to the contrary; that the armed Democracy in the South, fought many bloody battles to maintain it, aided by their less gallant co-laborers in the heart of the tolerant North; and that now all human beings are free and equal before the law.

The right triumphed in the war, and now it is announced by that section of the party who never smelled powder, that the result of that triumph is to be set aside and the black man returned to slavery, or a worse form of serf-dom, by depriving him of his only protection, the ballot. The union of the States and the stability of the government, are no considerations with that party; the ascendancy of the Slavocracy, and its accession to power, are the motives that rule in their councils, and guide every act. They only need a short breathing spell to renew the struggle which we had, happily, brought ended; but let us warn them, that, much as we love peace, we shall not accept it at the price of the liberty of the poorest among us, we shall fight another six years if necessary, to enforce the laws and maintain the Union, and under no circumstances can the foot of a slave ever tread on the North American continent.

The persecuted working people of Europe are by nature, in sympathy with the institutions of the United States. They are interested in promoting its welfare; zealous of its honors, and proud of its fame. In a word their hearts hold truer allegiance to this, than the government under which they have been born and reared. If veneration and love were all that are necessary to naturalization, they possess them. In feeling, they are natural born citizens of the United States, lovers of liberty and progress, and the implacable enemies of slavery and oppression in every form. How can they, under these circumstances, coalesce with a political party the foes of human freedom, the conservator of odious laws, the representatives of class rights, and the primary imitators of the old world despots, except that they are imposed upon by specious arguments and cajolery. Could they open one hidden pages that record the history of the past ten years, very few foreigners could place their names under such a record. Debased is the nature that could espouse the cause of the strong against the weak, the oppressor against his victim. He would be ignorant indeed, ignorant in the heart, the seat of generous emotions. It requires no book-learning to guide one's judgment in such matters; hence, the unlettered man, who only feels sympathy and fights for the right, is as valuable an individual as the most gifted.

It behooves the Great Republican party, that has saved the country, to rescue the foreign element, that is daily landing among us, from the clinches and devices of their Democratic captors, and as a matter of justice to itself, it ought to see to it that it is not misrepresented. That those people shall have an equal chance of judging as between the two political parties. Let it be known that it is the champion of civil and religious liberty, the defender of the Union and the Constitution; that education and progress in civilization are its special enterprises; that it protects the weak from the assaults of the strong, and allows no policy to hinder its exertions; that it is the friend of the foreigner who emigrates here to become a citizen; that its hospitality to him has been unbounded, for he can have for the asking a bounteous gift of some of the best land that the glad sun shines upon.

Is is the duty of all citizens, at this crisis in our National affairs, to guard against the calamity of civil war, which will, undoubtedly, follow if any of the questions, over which the war has been fought, shall be attempted to be annulled except in a Constitutional manner.—Watch the manoevering of Northern Democratic politicians in their endeavers to again create a Southern ascendancy, that they may conjointly rule—we ought to say, ruin the Republic. There can be no coalition between any party of northern men and Southern fire-eaters where the latter will not drag their accommodating accomplices with them, were it even to the ruin of their own homestead.

There are many questions of vital importance to the honor and life of the nation which will have to be forced upon the defeated Confederates. They are the architects of their own fortunes, and must be obliged to pay their share of the National debt, much as they dislike it; they will be obliged to contribute towards paying the pensions of our disabled soldiers; and their former slaves must be permitted all the rights and privileges of free citizens.

Let the Republican party proclaim that these questions are beyond attack. That there is no sacrifice they, individually, are not ready to make in their support. They are determined to allow no unlawful assault upon any sacred obligation of the nation. Its life and treasure are staked for their maintainance.

Republicanism appeals for support to all friends of liberty, to all law abiding people. While it holds forth the olive branch of peace, and desires to enjoy all its blessings, it is ever ready to battle for the right, to chastise disturbers, and mete out "equal and exact justice to all men."

Let the disappointed and vindicative leaders of the rebellion never more find partisans of their cause among us. Let them seek consolation in their own households. The interests and sympathies of the industrial populations of the North are identical—let them be united, and they shall command peace where all may enjoy the fruits of their labor, and the blessings of a good Government.

DR DAVID STANTON.

The Beaver Radical after concluding a well written and condensed biography of Dr. David Stanton, Auditor of the State, elect, says:

"The Republicans of Pennsylvania will mourn the loss of this chosen representative, who had already won large favor upon their confidence and esteem—But his place will soon be filled and the candidate and the politician will be forgotten in the whirl of the political excitement. It is the loss of the man and the citizen to our immediate community that is most afflicting. He will be missed in the social circle of which he was the life, and the profession which he ornamented. In the latter his place will be very hard to fill. His public spirit, liberality and progressiveness will be felt to the place of its residence where they have been long and gratefully felt. To the circle of his intimate friends his death is a blow to the heart. He was impulsive and positive, and had his enemies; but even these, we think, now that the earth covers him, will forget their differences, and mingle their sympathy with the sorrow of his friends.

"What is man's history? Born—living—dying!
Leaving the calm of for the tempest of life!
Mid storms and clouds and broken wrecks flying,
He casts his anchor in the silent grave.

As we write we look back a little more than half a score of years, to the time when we began the active duties of our life. The young men of whom the pride and the promise of our community—where are they? God's vengeance yet halts above the guilty: His mercy has been infinite to the worthless and the vile, but his falchion has been swift to smite those whom his erring creatures would have treasured to the last. One by one their lives have gone out, in the carnage of battle and the painful ordeal of disease, and for their youth, and high hopes, and the love which went out to them, there is left but the mound in the cemetery, and the memory of their worth yet green in the souls of a few. To this last and most startling dispensation our people can but bow in grief and awe as to those which went before, and to this dead Man, the tried and revered of them all, we say—true and brave heart—friend and Brother—Hail and Farewell!"

Have you a severe wrench or sprain? Have you rheumatism in any form? Have you stiff neck, or bunches caused by rheumatic pains? If so, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment is a specific remedy, and is also the best pain killer in the world.

We often see a large stock of cattle which do not seem to thrive, and come out "spring poor," all for want of something to start them in the right direction. One dollar's worth of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders, given to such a stock occasionally during the winter, would be worth more than an extra half ton of hay.

FOUR EVILS.—Whoever habitually uses any alcoholic preparations as an "appetizer" will be likely to suffer from four evils, viz: an over plus of food in the stomach, impaired ability to digest it, the pangs of dyspepsia, and a doctor's bill. DR. WALKER'S VEGETABLE VINEGAR BITTERS, the great Teetotal Restorative of the age, without over stimulating the palate or irritating the stomach, imparts a healthful appetite, promotes digestion, regulates the liver and bowels, purifies the blood, and thus, instead of entailing four evils, confers four inestimable benefits.

SHALL BE LIFTED—NEVERMORE.

It is amusing to look over the editorials of the Democratic papers in Pennsylvania since the October election.

A majority of their State Convention, by a vote of 76, adopted the "New Departure" doctrine and placed their State ticket squarely upon it. The party throughout the State swallowed the dose, with here and there a slight grunt, and the vote shows no uncommon variation from what might, with reason, have been expected from the espousal of a dogma so utterly at variance with former opinions. They swallowed the "beast with seven heads and ten horns" and kept it down with amazing fortitude until their signal defeat in October, when, by some convulsive energy of the "brute," they were seized with the most copious vomiting. It proves to be the most powerful emetic known to the Materia Medica.

Down, they say, with the 14th and 15th Amendments. Down with that infamous, naked and brazen lie embodied in the 9th resolution of the platform. Up with the Constitution as it was before the war. Which litterally means, down with the "Stars and Stripes" and up with the "Bars and Stars."

They have shown to the world that a rogue is just as good a candidate for them as an honest man. That an infamous platform subserves their purposes just as well as a righteous one, and that their appetite for office is so voracious that they can withstand any amount of nausea in order to secure it. They admit that the platform was a cheat, and having failed in the imposture, they admit the cheat and failure, and fall back again on the old and bloody doctrine of secession.

And this is the sum of the whole case: As the rebels who, having clothed themselves in Unionist uniform, captured from our soldiers, stole upon our troops and fired upon them in that disguise, the Democracy, like them, fought us in Unionist disguise, have been beaten, and dispersed—they propose to rally in the butternut and gray—they have been thrashed in the open field and in ambush.

They have tried every expedient.—They have assumed as many colors as the Chameleon and as many shapes as Proteus. In every shape and every disguise they have been detected in the cheat. Like the thief in the stocks, the cat o'nine tails can find no place on their backs not raw—no unflayed flesh. Down with the leaders of the New Departure the cry. Kill them off forsooth—"Time was, that when the brains were out, the man was dead," and so it would be of the Democratic party decapitated of the New Departurists. It would be the realization of the moral of the fable—of the hands and legs complaining of the belly. The whole head is sick, the whole heart is faint. The Democratic party is dead. "Requiescat in pace."—Let the turf rest lightly on its bosom, and every year let the rebels strew its grave with ivy and hellebore. It is dead, and on its tombstone the men of, we trust, a more progressive, loyal and patriotic party will read—"SHALL BE LIFTED, NEVERMORE!"

Sorely Puzzled.

With the dubious position of the editors of the Democratic party, some earnestly advocating and others bitterly opposing the "New Departure, the rank and file of Democracy are much in the predicament of a certain Irish door-keeper of a neighboring Legislature. The speaker of the Commons noticed some "soiled doves" mingling too freely in the gallery of the hall with the whiter "female pigeons." He summoned the janitor to his side and whispered in his ear to separate the sheep from the goats.—The Irishman started on his mission, but soon returned and poking his puzzled head inside of the door, bawled out, "Mr. Spaker, I have endeavored to do as you told me, according to my ability, but may the divil fly off with me auld jacket, if I can tell the sheep from the goats.

No Ku-Klux.

While Governor Lindsay and General Clanton were on their way to Washington to certify to the security of life and property in the State of Alabama, a band of disguised men visited the house of Alex. Lyons, a colored blacksmith living in Choctaw County, and shot him, killing him, and afterwards cut off his head all but the bones of his neck. His wife makes affidavit to the facts. The alleged cause was that his son, a lad of fourteen, taught colored children how to read.

BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN.

BELLEFONTE, PA.

A STIRRING POEM.

The surviving members of Company K, 57th Pennsylvania Veterian Volunteers, Titusville, held a re-union on the evening of October 1st, to celebrate the tenth anniversary of their departure. The company left Titusville on the 1st of October, 1861, and was then commanded by Capt. Cornelius S. Chase. The following poem, read before the association, by Capt. E. C. Strong, recounts their military history down to the close of the war. It vividly depicts the stirring scenes through which the Army of the Potomac passed, and will be read with pleasure by every soldier who served in that grand old army:

'Tis just ten years to-day
When we, a band true-hearted,
To battle for our country's rights,
From Titusville departed.
Harrisburg was our objective point,
We took the place, that's certain;
And for three week's we tarried there,
In muddy old Camp Curtin.

The brave Neil Chase was at our head,
His heart was in his work,
And duty was the word with him;
He never was known to shirk.
'Twas he who first did teach us how
To march, and shoulder arms;
Awkward enough it seemed to us,
Unused to war's alarms.

The boys they were uneasy then,
And would not give a cent
For being soldiers, 'less they joined
Some "bully regiment."
We took a vote one day—I think
It was November 'teventh—
When all the boys at once agreed
To join the Fifty-Seventh.

But Harrisburg was not the place
For men of fighting mettle;
We wished to meet our foes in arms,
And our accounts to settle.
And, while in parenthesis, let me say—
Lest hereafter we are counted—
Before the war was over, we
Saw more rebels than we wanted.

Well, time wore on, and we remained,
As near as I remember,
In that old camp, until about
The thirteenth of December.
Upon that day an order came,
It filled the boys with fun,
As they got on the cattle cars,
And struck for Washington.

Two months we lay at Washington;
'Twas mud, and daily drill,
Until we crossed the river, boys,
The army ranks to fill.
Incorporated then we were,
In Hofstetter's Division;
We never did regard that we
Were 'neath his supervision.

Saint Patrick's day, I know it was,
In eighteen sixty-two,
We started down the river, boys,
The rebel force to view.
Fortress Monroe then we reached;
Two weeks of pleasant weather,
We waited patiently, till 'Mac"
Could get his men together.

For Yorktown next we made a break,
Being in the old Third Corps;
Held the advance and soon we heard
The rebel cannon roar.
We squatted down before the place,
No camps were ever prettier,
And there we tried, with spade and pick,
To dig out John Magruder.

One day, while lying in our camp,
There came a noise inviting;
All those who wished could have a chance
To try their hands at fighting.
Peach Orchard, so they called the place,
No veterans e'er felt prouder
Than did our boys upon that day,
When first they did smell powder.

To Williamsburg, where Kearney led,
Was there a man to fire,
When "Old Phil," with his noted dash,
Rode through that reble line?
Where Hooker, battling from the morn
Until the early night;
He found Phil Kearney by his side,
He knew all things were right.

We "double-quicked" up to the front,
When Fair Oaks fight took place;
'Twas there we lost that noble soul,
Heroic Captain Chase.
There many a one of our boys
Received a battle scar,
There also were laid down the lives
Of Plummer and of Kerr.

While balls were whizzing, through the air,
And patriot blood was spilled,
Our Colonel badly wounded war,
And Major Culp was killed.
The deeds which you performed that day
Need no gilt nor enamel;
You would have rushed right into hell,
If led by "Charley Campbell."

Next came the bloody "Seven Days,"
Disastrous to the nation;
You firm in line of battle stood
Around old Savage station.
Charles City Cross Roads—there you fought
To stay the rebel tide;
There Williams did give up his life,
Hopkins and Hummer died.

The battle raged all afternoon,
And far into the night;
The next day found our line arrayed
On Malvern's bloody height.
Although they could not drive us from
The ground where we were standing,
We plodded on through mud and rain
'Till we reached Harrison's Landing.

Bull Run came next upon the list,
We fought on the right wing,
Where Pope thought he had Jackson 'bagged,'
But Longstreet cut the string.
Next came Chantilly's bloody fight,
Where we lost General Kearney.
His reputation was not built
By "correspondents" blarney.

Beneath the heights at Fredericksburg
Our lines we next did form,
Where desperate but vain attempts
Were made the works to storm.
It was one of the bloodiest fields
The sun e'er shone upon:
Our company lost a soldier true—
Young Edmund Robinson.

Thus closed the rough, ill-starred campaign
Of Eighteen Sixty-Two;
Though better fighting ne'er was done
Than "our boys" did do.
But no despondency was seen,
We knew our cause was right,
And victory would yet be ours—
Bright sunshine follows night.

Next, Chancellorsville, where "Old Stonewall"
Broke in on our flank;
He lost his life, and for the deed
His own men did thank.
Our boys, there, under Hooker's eye,
Were filled with martial ardor.
We lost a man we ill could spare—
True marksman—Corporal Barber.

Then next the hosts of "Bobby Lee"
For Gettysburg made tracks;
They fought as bravely for three days,
And then they showed their backs.
Our company did not lose a man;
We would have felt enraptured,
But Crosseley, and six of our men,
At Sherry's house was captured.

Then Wapping Heights and Auburn Creek,
Mine Run and Kelley's Ford;
Although we had some wounded men,
We put none 'neath the sward.
Locust Grove—that ends the list
For Eighteen Sixty-three.
At Brandy Station we encamped,
And let the rebels be.

A furlough home for thirty days.
To all who re-enlist,
The bounty did not catch the boys,
Furlough none could resist.
One of our boys made a remark,
I yet remember well;
"It's thirty days in paradise
For three years work in hell."

We all came back; had thirty days
Of fun in "Yankee" lands:
The citizens they greeted us
With open hearts and hands.
I might speak of the fun we had,
But then I guess I won't.
The time is up; we must return
Once more unto the front.

Then came the rough and fierce campaign
Of Eighteen Sixty-Four;
There was no rest from spring to fall,
The angry cannon's roar.
At early dawn the fourth of May,
With cavalry in the van,
We started off to Ely's Ford,
And crossed the Rapadan.

At Wilderness—that bloody fight—
We had some thirty wounded;
With dying groans and dreadful shrieks,
The dark'ning jungle sounded.
There Tillotson and Rifenburg,
Who had marched many miles,
Received a final muster-out
Along with Abraham Giles.

At Spottylvania, too, we were,
When "Hancock's Charge" was made,
Where at one swoop, captured all
Of "Stonewall's old Brigade."
A glorious charge! how out the mind
Back to the scene returns.
We mourned the loss of Moses Gregg,
And James and Johnny Burns.

North Anna, next Cold Harbor, then
Did stop the rebel host,
Another "flank move" must be made,
The prize must not be lost.
On, then to Petersburg we sped;
Another charge was made;
There Elderskin, with bayonet poised,
Low in the dust was laid.

Summer, autumn, early spring,
Fighting by night and day;
A dozen battles, more or less,
To our share we lay.
And thus we kept on pounding 'gainst
The city's earthen walls
The South Side Railroad is our last;
The "Cockade City" falls.

Now up and after "Uncle Bob,"
The foe must have no rest;
This is the last chance for a shot,
Let each man do his best.
Oh, wasn't it a glorious time,—
There was no one played sick,—
The day we clambered up the heights,
And fought at Sailor's Creek.

The Fifth Corps—Sheridan and Ord
In front—blocked up the way;
The Second, Ninth, and gallant Sixth
In the rear of "Bobby" lay,
His gallant little army he
Ran snug into the bag.
Lay down your arms and sheath your swords,
And furl your rebel rag

Oh, how the Union boys did cheer,
As long as we're alive,
We never will forget the Ninth
Of April, sixty-five.
No more the "Long Roll" shall be beat,
No more our lines we form.
The country's saved; our starry flag
Has weathered through the storm.

We mourn the loss of those who fall
In battle or disease;
Their fame will last till time's no more,
Their spirits are at ease.
Then let us mark that while they sleep.
In unknown sonnthern graves.
They fought for us, and died for us,
That we might no be slaves.

Old Company K, I'm proud of you;
The record, it will tell
That, when you were to duty called,
You did your duty well.
Let UNION be your watchword still,
Heed no disunion blather;
Be still remindful what it cost
To hold it firm together.

A LESSON FROM THE BIRDS.

ADDRESS DELIVERED SEPT. 9, 1871, TO A SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC, AT BEAVER CREEK, MD.

BY JOHN P. MITCHELL.

When this grove is ringing with the notes of the songs we sing here to-day, are our hearts as busy with the sentiments as our voices with the music? or are we only seeking, in these grand old woods, to rival the feathered songsters whose notes, all summer long, have filled the leafy canopy with music and gladness? If this is our purpose, we have entered upon a hopeless contest, for the voice of man is not tuned so sweetly as the voices of birds, and only by a great stretch of imagination can we say of the sweetest human singer, "he sings like a bird."

And yet, while we must acknowledge that these creatures which God has made to pour fourth sweet melody and to gladden the earth with song have the advantage of us in the sweetness of their harmony, how vast is our advantage over them if we answer the end of our being as truly as they answer the end of theirs. If we sing only to make a noise, they can sing better than we. But if we tune our voices to sing of God and heaven and eternal bliss, and if our hearts are full of thanksgiving and praise to him who so wonderfully made us for so glorious an end, how much we soar in soul above the choristers whose domain we have to day invaded.

I have watched these birds from day to day, and I think I have learned a lesson from them which I may repeat with profit, not only to the children here, but to all within sound of my voice.

They came hither with the genial beams of early spring, and I heard their song and saw them flit joyously in and out among these trees, apparently as happy and as free from care as childhood on a holiday morning. But they were happy in the midst of toil, for I heard the sturdy stroke of the wood-pecker, as he perseveringly labored from day to day, carving out in the limbs of the gnarled oak a home for his prospective family. And the sweet notes of the robbin, which made the morning air melodious, full of gladness and cheer as they were, began each morning a day of hard work, for the sticks and mosses and grassy linings of the robbin's nest were heavy loads to him, and with no little toil were they fixed into their places. And so all the feathered tribe which followed the retreating winter into these woods was busy in the work which God had given them to do. And when the nests were finished and received the precious eggs for which they had been made, and these gave place to young birds, and I heard their hungry chirpings for food, and family cares were imposed upon the parents, I heard no complaining notes; but food was sought for and obtained, and the song went on, and all was glad and joyous as though there was nothing for birds to do but sing and be glad, and let the world go on without a stroke of toil or a care.

Parents and children, these birds have as heavy a task imposed upon them in their sphere of life as any we have in ours. The struggle for the preservation of their lives is as hard as that in which we are engaged for the preservation of ours. The sticks they carried for their nests were as heavy timbers to them as those we handle in rearing our homes. The insects they slew and carred in triumph to their hungry brood, the grain they hunted in the blaze of the hot summer sun, the flights they had to escape the rapacious hawk, bring home to us thoughts of many a point of likeness between their lives and ours. Yet they have all the time set us an example of patience, perseverance and contentment, and they have greeted our ears with sweetest song while they labored on in ceaseless toil.

The same God who made them for their place in the creation, made us for ours; and while God's Son tells us that not a sparrow falls to the ground unnoticed by the Father, he adds that we are of more value than many sparrows. Why is it, then, that we, in our higher sphere, may not take up the toils of each day with hearts as light and songs as glad as theirs? Have we difficulties and dangers to harrass and try us? So have they; for I have heard the darkness resound with the dismal hoot of the owl which sought their lives, and I have seen the branch which held their precious family quiver in the storm. May they pursue their search of food with joyful anticipations of the chirpings which will give place to tones of gladness when the hungry mouth is filled? And may not we, while we toil at the plow or at the work bench, or in the store or study, to win the means of life for those dear to us, fill our hearts with happiness when we remember how gladly the fruits of our labor will be received by those for whom they were won? Or, if we must travel abroad, and often leave the delights of home behind us, have we not got our reward when our wanderings lead us back to the spot dearest to us on earth, and we feel from the depths of our hearts that

"'Tis sweet to hear the watch-dog's honest bark
Bay deep-mouth'd welcome as we draw near home,
'Tis sweet to know there is an eye will mark
Our coming, and look brighter when we come!"

All our earthly troubles have their corresponding joys, and all our earthly labors have their earthly reward. In these respects, I see not that we have either advantage or disadvantage of the humbler creatures which God has made. He has given us wants as mere animals, in common with all other creatures, and so he has placed within our reach the means of satisfying them. Why, then, are we not joyous and happy and full of song? Why are we often gloomy and sad, and brooding over our work, and complaining of our tasks, and feeling that our load is heavy to bear? There is one great law which we have violated which our present teachers—the birds—have kept, and their keeping of it has filled them with happiness and contentment, while our violation of it has filled our spirits with groaning and pain. They have fully carried out the end for which God made them. They are just what he intended them to be, and to be this is to be always happy. They are not so made that they can understand, in the least degree, the great and glorious plans of the Creator, and consequently they are so made that they naturally and instinctively carry out the will of God. They work like machines, filling the place for which they were made, and all the laws which govern their lives work unobstructedly and infallibly; for these laws were framed in an All-wise Mind. We have for our exalted privilege an understanding of the plans of God so far as is necessary to enable us to work with him in carrying them out. We cannot see the end of them, but we can receive intelligible directions from him who can, and if we follow these directions the end for which we are made will be reached by us, and in reaching it we are made happy to the fullest capacity of our natures. And so the life of a man who walks as God desires him to walk is a life of continuous pleasure, and where we hear of one who does this, we hear of one who cannot be plunged into gloomy melancholy by any event of life. Though the song of birds may cease when the seeker for prey has his wing between them and the sun, and though their hearts throb in fear when the hoot of the owl disturbs the stillness of the night, when the shadow is gone, and the morning light is come, the song is heard again, and the bright plumage flits through the sunshine as though deadly dangers were unknown. So when men of God are rudely seized by cruel hands, and beaten with many stripes, and covered with wounds, and thrust into a dark and loathsome inner prison, their hearts may sink and their nerves may quiver while the heavy hands are upon them. But in the very depths of the dungeon, with their feet in stocks, and with an unknown fate before them, a light reaches them which is not of this world. They remember the blessed Master who suffered for them; and it is a privilege to suffer for his sake; and they care not what men may do to them, for the spirit looks with unfaltering faith to the glorious home "over there," and the midnight silence is broken, and hymns of gladness fill the dismal prison, for the smarting wounds and the gloomy surroundings are remembered no more, for the exceeding joy with which faith in a glorified Redeemer, and obedience to him, have filled the hearts of his followers.

We have more to do it we accomplish the object for which we are made than animals have, but we have more to do it with, and the end is incalculably more glorious. And when we have listened while God speaks to us in his Word, and so learned what he will have us to do, we may bid defiance to time, and change, and death, and hold to our hearts a happiness which will enable us always to rejoice, and fill our souls with strong desire to praise God in song. Then have our songs a music and a richness which no harmony of earth can rival; and while with the organs of speech we make the earth resound, our hearts reach out toward the eternal blessedness and delightful rest of our home in heaven, a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

One more lesson from the birds, and we are done. Of late I have observed them gathering into flocks, and the songs they used to sing have changed for notes of a different character, and it is evident to any observer that they have something of importance in contemplation. We know from our observations in the past what it is they have in view. The cold winds which come sweeping down upon us touch the instincts of these little creatures with the impulse to flee away before the breath of the coming winter is upon them, to the sunny land where blossoms are ever blooming, and where the air is ever perfumed with the odor of flowers. In a little while we will have them with us no more. These trees, so beautiful and verdant now, will stretch their naked arms into a bleak, cold sky, and songs of gladness will not be heard here. But the same birds which have lent us their presence thro' the summer will be repeating their labors and singing their songs in a summer clime, and happiness is in store for them there as here, because they will follow out the laws of their nature then as they do now. There is a winter of life coming for us all. The hearts that beat high to-day will soon be silent in death. The voices we hear in song will be stilled forever. The places our presence now fills will know us no more. Are we preparing for that event so certain to come? Do we gather ourselves together, and cheer each other on, and speak of the home where no winter nor night nor storm can ever come, and where 'amid the flowers that deepened to their eternal beauty before the trees of Eden first bowed themselves to the breezes of earth," we may meet with all the good who have gone before, and dwell together in perfect happiness forevermore?

In midsummer there was a pair of birds which built a nest and reared their young within hand-reach of my door. The little ones grew rapidly, and when they were well feathered the nest could scarcely contain them, and the parents began operations to persuade them to fly. How fearful they were, and how careful, but how persevering. They meant that every little fledgling should learn the use of its wings. And I saw them for a little while about the trees, and then they all departed together, and if I ever saw them afterwards I could not distinguish the young from the old birds. Their development had come, and they were what they had been made for. Now, if these young birds had been left in the nest, with their wings unused, and no experience furnished them of how they ought to behave themselves to be perfect birds, they might have had food carried to them and lived in ease through the summer. But when the frosts were whitening the earth and smiting the leaves from the trees, and the cold winds were touching the death song of the dead summer, and other warblers were winging their flight to the sunny South, they must have been left to perish in our cheerless clime.

Christian parents, let me say to you that your work for your children is but poorly done when you fill their mouths with food and cover them with fine clothing. If this is done for them, and no more, you would do a less cruel thing to withhold all nourishment from them in feeble infancy, that they might in the morning go home to that clime where the sun will never set, and where no winter of life will ever come. When death comes, all that you have done for them as pertaining merely to this present life will only make them feel the more intensely the biting chill which will congeal their life forever. You must teach them to fly. God has given them capacities which may lay hold on undying life. The blessed Jesus, in his sublime prayer to the Father, says, "And this is life eternal, that they might know Thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou has sent." This knowledge must be imparted, and it is obtained at the unfailing fountain of divine truth, in the blessed volume which God has given us in our own language, the Holy Scriptures. Can a Christian be indeed a Christian who labors only to give children luxury and ease here, and fails to give them knowledge of God and of Christ, that they may secure "that good part which cannot be taken away?" The world has never seen an institution so well adapted to the teaching of the truths of the Bible to children as the Sunday school, and it is not half what it might be, and what by God's help it will be when we all give ourselves to the work as we should. Let us make this day of rejoicing and good cheer an epoch in the history of our Sunday school, and of the community in which we labor, and work in the coming year as we have never done before to teach children the truth and lead them to God.

Fathers and mothers, let us learn a lesson from the birds, which have finished their summer work about us, and are now ready to depart with their young

"To the land of the cedar and vine,
Where the flowers ever blossom, the beams ever shine," and where the capacities which have been developed here may exert themselves in new scenes of happiness and summer joy.

The sunny head that nestles in your bosom now cannot always rest there. The hand with which you push aside the thorns which beset your child's pathway will grow feeble, and after while death will clasp it, and your children's tears will fall upon the cold clay which has given up the tenant who once loved them as only a parent ever loves. If you give your children all that earth can offer, you give them nothing which can serve them or you when they stand about your dying form at the last and see the last of a parent's love as the light of earth fades from your glazing eye forever. Then your battles for them will be done, and their own will but begin. But give them what God offers, what heaven furnishes, what Jesus Christ has brought right to among us, and you tie a family circle together with a bond which death cannot sever, and which will grow stronger and stronger throughout all eternity, while you furnish your children with an irresistible weapon for the battle of life.

May God help us all in every work which he has given us to do, is my prayer.

ENDEAVOR to take your work quietly. Anxiety and over action are always the cause of sickness and restlessness. We must use our judgment to control our excitement, or our bodily strength will break down. We must remember that our battle is to be won by a strength not our own. It is a battle that does not depend upon the swift and strong.

THE one serviceable, safe, certain remunerative, attainable quality in every study and in every pursuit is the quality of attention. My own invention or imagination would never have served me as it has but for the habit of commonplace, humble, patient, daily, toiling, drudging attention.

A philosopher hath said: He who is passionate and hasty is generally honest. It is your cold, dissembling hypocrite you should beware of. There's no deception in a bull dog. It is only the cur that sneaks up and bites you when your back is turned.

No matter how bright the future looks, don't waste the present in speculating on prospective fortune. The brilliant aurora which to-night makes all the heaven flash like a golden dome of light, harbingers a dreary, chilly sky to-morrow.

HOPE is the dawn of joy, and memory its twilight; but this prefers to shed the coolness dew or rain, and the day which the dawn promises, breaks in; but on another earth, and under another sun.

Look not mournfully into the past; it comes not back again. Wisely improve the present—it is thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy future without fear, and with a manly heart.

THROUGH LIFE.

We slight the gifts that every season bears,
And let them fall unheeded from our grasp
In our great eagerness to reach and clasp
The promised treasure of the coming years.

Or else we mourn some great good passed away,
And, in the shadow of our great grief shut in,
Refuse the lesser good we yet might win,
The offered peace and gladness of to-day.

So through the chambers of our life we pass,
And leave them, one by one, and never stay
Not knowing how much pleasantness there was
In each, until the closing of the door
Has sounded thro' the house, and died away,
And in our hearts we sigh, "Forevermore."

Every-day Duties.

There are a great many kinds of charity, and many people have many ways of displaying it. Practical people do not consider it charity to give a penny to the street mendicant, of whom nothing is known, and haggle with a poor man, out of employment, for a miserable dime. It is not charity to beat down a poor seamstress to starvation prices; let her sit in her wet clothes sewing all day; to deduct from her pitiful remuneration if the storm delays her prompt arrival. It is not charity to take a poor relative into your family, and make her a slave to all your whims, and taunt her continually with her dependent situation. It is not charity to turn a poor man who is out of work into the street, with his family, because he cannot pay his rent. It is not charity to exact the utmost farthing from the widow and orphan. It is not charity to give with a supercilious air and patronage, as if God had made you the rich man, of different blood from the shivering recipient, whose only crime is that he is poor. It is not charity, though you bestow your alms by thousands, if you bestow it grudgingly and reluctantly. It is far from charity for an employer to be constantly goading and carping at an employee—it not only impairs his efficiency, but renders him sour and discontented. Men who hire workmen should try to encourage them, and they in return will labor far more cheerfully and earnestly for them. The true secret is to pay your men liberally, promptly and regularly, and in this true charity you will find yourself surrounded by people who are true and devoted friends.

Sympathy and Deeds.

Sometimes these get widely separated in this great world. Sympathy is easy and cheap. Deeds cost time, and effort, and money. To say to a needy and deserving applicant "be ye warmed," or "be ye filled," taxes but a breath. To warm them with clothing, and fill them with food, takes brain work, and heart work, and hand work united. The feeling which does not clothe itself with a corresponding deed soon dies out of the heart for want of action, while the deed recruits upon the smothered nature, and gives new force and power to the emotion itself. The spring which waters a meadow and supplies a household with its drink, becomes a stagnant and useless pool the moment you dam up its gushing outflow and man and beast turn aliseaway from it green and poisonous waters. So a heart gushing with sympathy, if restricted and impaired so that it cannot or does not express itself in corresponding deeds, becomes itself dead, and loses the power, at length, of imparting to others a joy which it does not itself possess. Let blossoming sympathy ripen into deeds of generosity, and you should be like a living tree, giving daily of your own life for the life of others.

A BEAUTIFUL THOUGHT.—I was reading the other day, that on the shores of the Adriatic sea the wives of the fishermen, whose husbands have gone far off upon the deep, are in the habit, at even tide, of going down to the sea shore, and singing, as female voices only can, the first stanza of a beautiful hymn; after they have sung it they will listen till they hear, borne by the wind across the desert sea, the second stanza sung by their gallant husbands, as they are tossed by the gale upon the waves, and both are happy. Perhaps, if we listen, we too, might hear on this desert world of ours some whisper borne from afar to remind us that there is a heaven and a home; and when we sing the hymn upon earth, perhaps we shall hear it echo breaking in the music upon the sands of time, and cheering the hearts of those that are pilgrims and strangers, and look for a city that hath foundation.

LEARN that happiness is not outside, but inside. A good heart and a clear conscience bring happiness, which no riches and no circumstances alone ever do.

A MIRACLE!
MR. SAMUEL BELL, of W. F. Schmertz & Co., Wholesale Boot and Shoe Manufacturers, 31 Fifth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., has been afflicted with chronic rheumatism for thirty years, from his right hip to his foot, having to use a crutch and a cane, and at times so painful as to utterly incapacitate him from attending to his business. Having tried every remedy known, without effect, except Gilliland's Pain Killer he was finally induced to try it. A second application enabled him to lay aside his crutch, and a third effected a permanent cure. Mr. Bell, as a popular and well-known citizen, is a living monument of the efficacy of that great medical discovery, Gilliland's Pain Killer. The afflicted should ask their grocer or druggist for it and try its wonderful power. Mr. Gilliland, we understand, wants a respectable agent in every town and country for it. The principal office is at 72 Third Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. v3n44-4.

DUNS, MONEY, &c.

Our exchanges all, or nearly all, come to us containing duns—polite invitations to their patrons to pay up. Some of them appear to be in a scolding mood, others go about it in a rather pleasant manner and in well written articles. We give the following, from the Huntingdon Journal, as a specimen of the latter class:

AN EARNEST WORD TO THOSE OF OUR SUBSCRIBERS WHO HAVE FAILED TO PAY UP.

THOSE WHO OWE US NOT ING NEED NOT READ THIS—IT IS NOT INTENDED FOR THEM.

"We hope, however, that every subscriber, who has not settled with us, will read what follows and take advantage of the suggestions: We do not desire to dun you, and yet, for the life us, we do not see how we can avoid it. You fail to pay and we need our money badly.—If there were only one, or two, or a dozen, or even a hundred of you, we might very readily stand it, but when you are told that out of the 1600 bona fide subscribers on our list, not one-half of the number have paid up for the year 1871, you begin to see that it figures up an aggregate that will run our establishment four or five months. But independent of the inconvenience we sustain, in not having our money and in being obliged to make our creditors wait, it is only adding additional expense upon you. And here we desire to say that there is no man in Huntingdon county so poor that he cannot take and pay two dollars a year for his county paper. Where is the man, we ask, who cannot save one dollar, in six months, for a newspaper?—And as to the relative influence of the newspaper, it is next to the Bible; the latter teaches the way to Heaven, while the former teaches the way of the World and no one can expect to make much headway, either here or hereafter, without a pretty accurate knowledge of both. But this is a digression. The rich man just as frequently fails to pay as the poor man. Why? Because he considers two dollars a mere trifle, and, we suppose, thinks we regard it in the same light. We might were it not for the frequent duns that are thrust at us. But remember the ocean is made up of mere tiny grains of sand. But outside of our needy circumstances we would like to get our subscription business to as near a cash basis as possible. We can't have a very good opinion of the subscriber who allows his subscription to run for years without making an effort to pay up, and before one of our subscribers have time to foot up bills we want them to pay up and keep paid up.

We endorse every word of the above, and adopt it as our own, so far as it applies to our locality. We hope every subscriber who has not paid his subscription will do so at once. We need our money, and need it badly. The fact is, we must have it. We do not wish to part company with any of our subscribers; our efforts are to increase rather than diminish our list; but we cannot send the paper forever without money. Our subscribers, whether they be rich or poor, should remember that they cannot get any city daily or weekly paper until they have paid for it in advance.

When you remember this fact you will realize the great accommodation, and the obligations you are under to us, for sending you the paper from one to three years on credit. We shall not continue this policy.

We are sending bills to all of our subscribers, and to those who owe us for job work and advertising, and we sincerly hope they will be cordially and punctually responded to.

Democratic Administration in Alabama.

In looking at the financial condition of the State of Alabama, we find that the administration of the finances under Gov. Lindsay forms no exception to that of Democratic mismanagement generally.

Alabama bonds, which were above par during the Republican administration in that State, are to-day quoted at eighty-seven. So much for Democratic rule.

The Alabama State Journal in a late issue says:

"The Republican administration in Alabama paid the sum of two hundred thousand dollars, to close up the FAILURES of the Patton so called Democratic administration in this State. The Republican administration in Alabama paid the State's interest, paid the school teachers, and settled up over two hundred thousand dollars of warrants contracted by the Patton administration, and closed the books with a clear balance in the treasury of forty thousand dollars, which was turned over to the Lindsay-Hodgson so-called Democratic government. To-day the Treasury is bankrupt, and Alabama paper is being bought up at a discount of twenty-five per cent. on SCHOOL WARRANTS.—Eight months of Democratic "sway" has run the credit of Alabama into suspicion, and the State Treasurer publicly states and publishes that Lindsay-Hodgson can not pay school teachers. Facts are stubborn things. Figures never lie."

SLOTH makes all things difficult, but industry all easy; and he that rises late must trot all day, and shall scarce overtake his business at night; while laziness travels so slowly that poverty soon overtakes him.

THE KU-KLUX REIGN OF TERROR.

SYNOPSIS OF A PORTION OF THE TESTIMONY TAKEN BY THE CONGRESSIONAL INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE.

No. IV.

B. B. Eggleston, Assessor of Internal Revenue at Columbus, testifies that he is satisfied there is an organization whose object is "to carry into effect its political matters." Has received many anonymous letters in the name of the Ku Klux Klan, but has never been personally molested. He has frequently heard of whippings, such outrages generally being perpetrated upon freedmen. He thinks the object of the organization is to intimidate Republican voters and keep them away from the polls.

Hon. O. C. French, of Natchez, member of the State Legislature, and chairman of the special joint committee appointed by the Legislature to inquire into the causes and circumstances of the riot which occurred at Meridian in March last, testifies that the riot grew out of the incursions of bodies of men from beyond the Alabama line, who with their abettors in Meridian, were accustomed to perpetrate outrages in that vicinity. In some of these incursions as many as from 100 to 250 men came into the town and stacked arms in the street. On one occasion they carried away three colored men, who were never afterwards heard of. Seven persons were killed in the riot, among whom were William Dennis (or Clopton) who had been a member of a committee sent to represent the condition of affairs to the Governor of the State, and Warren Tyler, a colored school teacher. Dennis was wounded in the court room, where the riot commenced; thrown from a second story window, and afterwards carried into the sheriff's office, where his throat was cut.

Judge Bramlette was shot in the court at the outbreak of the riot.

—— Krizer, a colored member of the Board of Supervisors, was shot and lost an arm, and another member of the Board was killed.

J. Aaron Moore, (colored,) member of the Legislature from Lauderdale county, was wounded in the riot, and hotly persued to take his life, but escaped. His house was burned, and he has not since dared to return to his home.

A colored church in Meridian was burned the same day.

On Tuesday night, March, 7th, (the day after the riot,) three colored men were taken out to the woods by a body of Alabama Ku Klux and murdered. The same party shot a woman near the State line on their way back to Alabama.

The declared object of these raiders from Alabama, and their coadjutors in Meridian, was to make the latter place "too hot to hold" certain Republican officials, especially Mayor Sturgis, whose offence was said to be that he "associated with colored people too much, and attended their meetings."

The State Superintendent of Education informed witness that from twenty to twenty-five colored school houses had been burned during the last year.

Robert W. Flournoy, Superintendent of Schools in Pontotoc county, and editor of a paper in the town of Pontotoc, testifies that in his capacity of Superintendent he organized sixty-four schools in the county—fifty-two white and twelve colored—and appointed the teachers solely on the ground of their qualifications, and without regard to their politics. A number of the teachers of colored schools were waited upon by parties of Ku Klux in the night and informed that they must stop teaching, which some of them did, the Ku Klux announcing their determination to break up all the colored schools in the State. Witness believes one of these teachers was whipped.

Witness, through his newspaper, denounced this interference with the schools in very strong terms, and soon afterwards learned that the Ku Klux were threatening to attack him. On the night of the 12th of May, or between 12 P. M., of the 12th and 1 A. M., of the 13th, a party of disguised men entered the town and enquired for the residence of Col. Flournoy. Witness joined a number of citizens outside of his own residence, who united with him in making a resistance, the result of which was that one member of the gang was killed. A number of disguises were afterwards picked up. These bands had been riding through the county and whipping colored people for several months before this attack on the witness, and such is the reign of terror that many persons, whose backs they have "cut all to pieces," will actually deny having been whipped by them, having been told that they would be killed if they opened their mouths about it.

A Republican is not safe in advocating his sentiments in the part of the State where witness resides. In 1868, one Mr. Clark, a Republican speaker, was attacked at a public meeting, and had his leg broken. During the same campaign another Republican speaker, Dr. Kerr, was called out of his house, and shot in his own yard. At other points Republican meetings were broken up the same year.

Witness has heard of Ku Klux outrages in the counties of Union, Tippah, Leake, Lee, Pontotoc, Prentiss, Alcorn, Tishemingo, Itawamba, Monroe, Lowndes, Noxubee, Oktibbeha, Choctaw, Winston, and Kemper.

The next witness is a gentleman from Noxubee county, who states that his occupation is that of a planter, and his politics Democratic, though he has "not sought political reputation at all." He seems to have a very intimate knowledge of the Ku Klux organization. He states that things are in a bad way in his own county, and in the adjoining counties of Winston, Kemper, and Lowndes, from fifteen to twenty murders having been committed during the nine months preceding the date of his testimony.

Sam Koger (colored,) killed by a body of about thirty disguised men, near Brookville. Koger was "an ignorant freedman," but "a good farm hand, and bore a good reputation."

—— Hopkins, a colored preacher, killed in Noxubee county about April 1st. The first intention of the Ku Klux was merely to whip him in order to stop his preaching, but he hallooed so loudly that they "thought it best to kill him." [So small a matter does human life appear to these murderous ruffians.]

Dick Malone, (colored,) shot dead while standing by the roadside watching a body of Ku Klux ride by, March 1st, 1871. Malone was an industrious blacksmith, guilty of no offence whatever; but it is supposed some of the Ku Klux thought he would recognize them.

Twenty-five negroes were whipped the same night on the same plantation and the one adjoining (known as the Millbanks plantation.) The object, as expressed by the witness, was "to straighten the neighborhood and make the negroes subservient."

George Chestnut, (a colored schoolteacher, in the eastern part of Noxubee county,) killed by Ku Klux from beyond the Alabama line, in January last. He had been in Alabama electioneering.

A colored man, (name unknown to witness,) killed near Sugar Creek, in the latter part of 1870.

Witness cannot distinctly call to mind the other cases, but there have been from fifteen to twenty murdered in the county within a year, all but one of them by disguised men, and the number whipped has been far greater than the number killed. Has heard of two or three murders in Winston county, eight or ten in Lowndes, and six or eight in Kemper, within a year past, while whipping has been a common occurrence.

Witness has attended several Ku Klux meetings, having been invited by a neighbor who was a member of the order, and who vouched for him. It was known that he had served under Forrest in the rebel army, and was, therefore, taken for granted that he was "all right," but he never joined the order or took their oath. Their meetings are held in secluded places in the woods or swamps, and at such times the cases of persons supposed to "need attention" are discussed, and the course of action to be adopted decided upon.

There are generally four or five bands in a county, (speaking of his own and adjoining counties,) and the commander of the largest band is the ranking officer for the county. The klans of different counties communicate with each other, and on important occasions they co-operate. The order has its signs and passwords. Witness is sorry to say" that its members are all Democrats. He understands that the order originated in Tennessee, and that its purpose was political, (to make the negroes vote the Democratic ticket.) Has heard that Forrest was the originator of the organization, but does not know how true that is.

Witness participated in one of the Ku Klux raids. The band marched like a company of cavalry, having a captain and two lieutenants. They whipped nine negroes in different cabins on one plantation that night. Their offence was renting land. When the order for the whipping was passed "in camp," it was argued that if the negroes were made to give up the land, they could then be hired by white planters. They were all stripped to the skin when whipped, and forty or fifty lashes apiece administered. In one or two instances blood was drawn. Two of the persons whipped on this occasion were women, who "were hallooing and making a noise." The men were all told they must vote the Democratic ticket.

Witness thinks the organization ought to be broken up. Knowing it is very detrimental to his county, as it interferes with labor. There is a general feeling of terror among the negroes. He has known all the negroes on plantations to leave and take to the woods. This has happened on his own plantation. This state of things make it difficult to get labor in his section. On being asked the names of such persons as he knew to be members of the order, the witness inquired, "Am I compelled to answer that?" The committee decided unanimously in the affirmative. He then gave the names, of the captain, two lieutenants, and thirty privates in his own neighborhood.

FUNERALS attended with an elegant Hearse, by O'Bryan.

THE PULPIT'S DUTY DONE.

A ROMAN CATHOLIC CLERGYMAN'S EXCORIATION OF THE THIEVES OF THE RING!

The following words of wisdom from the lips of the good Father McClancy, of S. Joseph's Church N. Y. should be read by everybody. They are extracts from his sermon on Sunday morning the 5th inst:

I see no reason why the field of politics should be the priviledged asylum of the vices; why intemperance, blasphemy and dishonesty should seek refuge there to prey upon society and eat out the vitals of our prosperity; and that the clergyman may not hunt and expose to the reprobation of all just men.

To-day I address you as the sovereign people, as the rulers of the land, and as the morning of the day of the election approaches, I ask you what you will do on that day? When you appoint your officials, when you elect your agents to office, what do you surrender into their hands? Nothing less than your lives, your liberties, and your property. You intrust them with the education of your children, you confide to them the framing of the laws by which you will be governed in the pure administration of justice. You intrust into such hands nothing less than the prosperity of this great State and the wealth of four millions of people.

A tailor, an ordinary one, must serve a long apprenticeship to his business; so must a carpenter or a blacksmith; the druggist must submit to a critical examination; a lawyer or a clergyman who would fit himself for his position must give up the best years of his life to study and labor. But it seems our legislators, to whom we trust so much, need nothing of the sort. many of those whom you have sent time and again—I make some honorable exceptions—to represent you in the Legislature, may never read the Constitution of the United States or that of the State of New York, and probably are not aware of its existence. And no business house in New York, the meanest or poorest, would take them as agents. With all their boldness, they themselves would never be guilty of such an absurdity, after the training they have received, by listening to the speeches of the session, to apply even for a clerkship; and the very smallest item of these things which you intrust to their care is the enormous wealth of the Empire State. I insist a little on education and would say to you it is not merely as a qualification for office, but it is likewise a guarantee for honesty. Every educated man has a large circle of friends who are somewhat sensitive upon the principles of truth and honesty. Such men, I dare say, may be corrupted; but it will cost a great deal to do so. They value themselves too highly to be bought cheaply. But if a single individual should be bought, you may depend upon it that a Legislature so composed could never be bought. I should be satisfied, and all would be satisfied, if you would send to the Legislature respectable mechanics—men who, by their former good conduct in honestly supporting their families, and doing their duty to their fellow men, have won for themselves the respect of their own class. You might well imagine these things would be guarantees for their honesty. They would be men of ordinary intelligence at least; and, knowing the wants of their own class, that most numerous and best class of our society, would be able to legislate for their interests. But instead of doing this you send men to the Legislature who never earned an honest dollar nor never will. The veriest blackguards, debauchers, and gamblers; the very Barabbases of a nation, you elected in preference to upright and honest men.

It is said that some men do more than their share of voting. I own that for a long time I would not credit it. I did know that there were men so bad in society that they could be led into any evil deeds; but this I supposed to be too suicidal for any man to be guilty of. Nevertheless, it seems to be a fact, and you may see these gangs led along the streets on election days. What are they doing? These men should be the personal enemies of every good citizen, for they are aiming a blow at the very vitals of our governmental prosperity. Even they are to be pitied; but those who prompt them—those who by their legislation pave the way for this iniquity—should be the personal enemies of every man in society. For what do they do? Perjury seems to be the blackest of their crimes. You do not hear of it often, but is the whitest portion of their guilt. The greatest crime they are committing is the murdering of your liberties and mine. And for what object? Merely to support those who are willing to crush them when the occasion occurs, or to shoot them down like dogs as they deserve.

That is one scene that our election day presents. We look upon another. A man struts along the walk who is appointed to work the ward. See him now, as he approaches and buttonholes the laborer; or mechanic. For God's sake turn your eyes away! for the poor wretch is bribed, and his bribe is a—drink. Come ye friends of the laboring class, see this sight, and wring your hands with grief. Come ye the good men of all the past and present, thinking of these things which we have seen, and look upon this land where there is no clanking chains; where every man is a free man, with equal liberties and equal opportunities; where in our schools the poor man's son may enter and find himself at the head of a college before long.

THE POLITE FOR MANSLAUGHTER.—When a man has been dosed to death with mineral poisons, we are told that his medical attendant has 'lost a patient.' It would be rude to say "the patient has been poisoned." Yet that would be the truth, and it is treason to humanity to disguise it. Dyspeptics, nervous sufferers, debilitated and broken down invalids of every type, if you covet that inestimable blessing, PHYSICAL VIGOR, resort without delay to Hoofland's German Bitters or to Hoofland's Tonic, composed of the same vegetable elements with a stimulant superadded. These specifics from the medicine chests of nature restore the strength, regulate the secretions, purify the blood, invigorate the constitution, and clear the brain. Principal Depot, 631 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa. Sold everywhere by Druggists.

AN APPEAL!

To Debilitated Persons,
To Dispeptics,
To Sufferers from Liver Complaint,
To those having no Appetit,
To those with broken down Constitutins
To Nervous People,
To Children Wasting Away,
To anyone with debilitated digestive Organs

Or suffering with any of the following Symptoms which indicate Disordered Stomach or Liver.

such as Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness or Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for food, Fullness or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at Pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried and difficult breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or suffocating Sensations when in a Lying Posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or Webs before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, &c., Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

Hoofland's German Bitters.

A Bitters without Alcohol or Spirits of any kind.

Is different from all others. It is composed of the pure Juices, or VITAL PRINCIPLE OF ROOTS, HERBS, and BARKS, for, as medicinally termed, Extracts, the worthless or inert portions of the ingredients not being used. Therefore in one Bottle of this Bitters there is contained as much medicinal virtue as will be found in several gallons of ordinary mixtures. The Roots, &c., used in this Bitters are grown in Germany, their vital principles extracted in that country by a scientific Chemist, and forwarded to the manufactory in this city, when they compounded and bottled. Containing no spirituous ingredients, this Bitters is free from the objections urged against all others: no desire for stimulants can be induced from their use, they cannot make drunkards, and cannot under any circumstances, have any but a beneficial effect.

Hoofland's German Tonic.

Was compounded for those not inclined to extreme bitters, and is intended for use in cases when some alcoholic stimulant is required in connection with the Tonic properties of the Bitters. Each bottle of the tonic contains one bottle of the Bitters, combined with pure SANTA CRUZ RUM and flavored in such a manner that the extreme bitterness of the bitters is overcome forming a preparation highly agreeable and pleasant to the palate, and containing the medicinal virtues of the Bitters. The price of the Tonic is $1.50 per Bottle, which many persons think too high. They must take into consideration that the stimulant used is guaranteed to be of a pure quality. A poor article could be furnished at a cheaper price, but is it not better to pay a little more and have a good article? A medicinal preparation should contain none but the best ingredients; and they who expect to obtain a cheap compound, and be benefitted by it, will most certainly be cheated.

SPEAK FOR THESE REMEDIES.

Who would ask for more Dignified or Stronger Testimony?

HON. GEORGE W. WOODWARD, formerly Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and present Member of Congress from Pennsylvania, writes:

PHILADELPHIA, March 16, 1871.

I find "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a good tonic, useful in diseases of the digestive organs, and of great benefit in case of debility and want of nervous action in the system. Yours, truly,

GEO. W. WOODWARD.

HON. JAS. THOMPSON, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania,

PHILADELPHIA, April 28, 1867.

I consider "Hoofland's German Bitters" a valuable medicine in case of attacks of indigestion or Dyspepsia. I can certify this from my own experience of it.

Yours, with respect, JAS. THOMPSON.

PHILADELPHIA, June 1, 1868.

I have found by experience that "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a very good tonic, relieving dyspeptic symptoms almost directly.

GEORGE SHARSWOOD.

HON. JAS. M. WOOD, Ex-Mayor of Williamsport, Pa.

I take great pleasure in recommending "Hoofland's German Tonic" to any one who may be afflicted with Dyspepsia. I had the Dyspepsia so badly it was impossible to keep any food on my stomach, and I became so weak, as not to be able to walk half a mile. Two bottles of Tonic effected a perfect cure. JAMES M. WOOD.

MARASMUS,

Or Wasting away of the Body.

REMEMBER

THAT

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN REMEDIES

Are the medicines you require to purify the Blood, excite the torpid Liver to healthy action, and to enable you to pass safely through any hardships or exposure.

DR. HOOFLAND'S PODOPHYLLIN,

Or Substitue for Mercury Pills.

TWO PILLS A DOSE.

The Most Powerful, Yet Innocent Vegetable Cathartic Known.

It is not necessary to take a handful of these Pills to produce the desired effect; two of them act quickly and powerfully, cleansing the Liver, Stomach and Bowels all impurities. The principal ingredient is Podophyllin, or the Alcoholic Extract of Mandrake, which is by many times more powerful, acting and searching than the Mandrake itself. Its peculiar action is upon the Liver, cleaning it speedily from all obstructions, with all the power of Mercury, yet free from the injurious results attached to the use of that mineral.

For all diseases, in which the use of a cathartic is indicated, these pills will give entire satisfaction in every case. They NEVER FAIL.

In cases of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia and extreme costiveness, Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters or Tonic should be used in connection with the Pills. The tonic effect of the Bitters or Tonic builds up the system. The Bitters or Tonic purifies the Blood, strengthens the Nerves, REGULATES the Liver, and gives strength, energy and vigor.

Keep your Bowels active with the Pills, and tone up the system with Bitters or Tonic, and no disease can remain a short, or ever assail you.

Recollect that it is DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN REMEDIES that are so universally used and highly recommended; and do not allow the Druggist to induce you to take anything else that he may say is just as good, because he makes a larger profit on it. These Remedies will be sent by Express to any locality, upon application to the PRINCIPAL OFFICE, at the GERMAN MEDICINE STORE, 631 Arch St., Philadelphia.

THE AMERICAN WASHER?

PRICE $5.50

THE AMERICAN WASHER SAVES MONEY, TIME, AND DRUDGERY.

The Fatigue of Washing Day no Longer Dreaded, but Economy, Efficiency, and Clean Clothing, Sure.

In calling public attention to this little machine, a few of the invaluable qualities, (not possessed by any other washing machine yet invented,) are here enumerated.

It is the smallest, most compact, most portable, most simple in construction, most easily operated. A child ten years old, with a few hours' practice, can thoroughly comprehend and effectually use it. There is no adjusting, no screws to annoy, no delay in adapting! It is always ready for use! It is a perfect little wonder! It is a miniature giant, doing more work and of a better quality, than the most elaborate and costly. One half of the labor is fully saved by its use, and the clothes will last one-half longer than by the old plan of the rub board. It will wash the largest blanket. Three shirts at a time, washing thoroughly! In a word, the ablution of any fabric, from a Quilt to a Lace Curtain or Cambric Handkerchief, are equally within the capacity of the LITTLE GEM! It can be fastened to any tub and taken of at will.

No matter how deep rooted a prejudice may exist against Washing Machines, the moment this little machine is seen to perform its wonders, all doubts of its cleansing efficacy and utility are banished, and the doubter and detractor at once becomes the fast friends of the machine.

We have testimonials without end, setting forth its numerous advantages over all others, and from hundreds who have thrown aside the unwieldy, useless machines, which have signally failed to accomplish the object promised in prominent and loud-sounding advertisements.

It is as perfect for washing as a wringer is for wringing. The price another paramount inducement to purchasers, has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every housekeeper and there is no article of domestic economy that will repay the small investment so soon.

$5.50.

All that is asked for this GREAT LABOR SAVER, is a fair trial. We guarantee each machine to do its work perfectly.

COURT PROCLAMATION.

Whereas the Hon. Charles A. Mayer, President of the court of Common Pleas, in the 25th Judicial District, consisting of the counties of Centre, Clinton and Clearfield, and the Honorable John Hosterman and the Honorable William Allison, Associate Judges in Centre county, having issued their precept, bearing date the 28th day of March A. D., 1871, to me directed for holding a court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery and Quarter Sessions of the Peace in Bellefonte, for the county of Centre, and to commence on the 4th Monday of Nov. next, being the 27th day of November 1871, and to continue two weeks.

Notice is therefore hereby given to the Coroner, Justice of the Peace, Aldermen and Constables of the said county of Centre, that they be then and there in their proper persons, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, with their records, inquisitions, examinations, and their own remembrances, to do those things which to their office appertains to be done, and those who are bound in recognizances to prosecute against the prisoners that are or shall be in the Jail of Centre county, be then and there to prosecute against them as shall be just.

Given under my hand, at Bellefonte, the 27th day of June in the year of our Lord, 1871, and in the ninety-fourth year of the Independence of the United States.

IN THE WRONG HOUSE.

BY F. DELACY.

Major John Parkinson was a good-looking bachelor who had lived forty-five years, but one who had taken such good care of himself that he was really quite a young man.

He had gone out to India when only fifteen years old and was now returning after a thirty years absence, the possessor of an ample fortune, most of which he had already sent to America for investment.

The Major did not like boarding houses and had therefore written to his agent in New York to purchase and have fitted up for him a comfortable residence in some good neighborhood.

On a cold rainy November evening the "Ghundaree" entered the harbor bringing the Major once more to his native land. He eagerly hastened to the office of his agent for information regarding the location of his new home determined to pass the first night of his arrival under his own roof.

On reaching the office of Mr. South, his agent, he learned that he was absent, but the key had been left for him accompanied by a note regretting that business in the country compelled the writer to relinquish the pleasure of personally greeting the Major on his arrival, but assuring him that he would find his house in complete order with servants to minister to his wants.

Though sorry the agent had not been able to meet him personally, the Major made the best of it, and turned to the card attached to the key for instruction, as to the location of his residence, and saw written thereon: "No.——Wakely street, but what number, unfortunately the card did not say!" "However," muttered the Major, "I can't go very far wrong, as it says, between Hudson and Vandam streets. At the worst, it is only trying the doors along with my key until I come to the right one.

And the Major strolled briskly off through the rain, humming to himself, "Home, sweet home."

After much inquiry of policemen and consulting of directories at corner drug stores, and studying of cabalistic characters on the street lamps, our Major succeeded in discovering Wake-street—a broad, handsome street, lined on each side with substantial looking brown stone houses.

"A very good neighborhood," thought the Major, approvingly; "very good indeed. I don't object to this sort of thing at all. Smith is certainly a capital judge of real estate. Now I wonder which of these houses belong to me?"

They were all painfully alike—all with handsome bay-windows on the first floor, imposing flights of stone steps, and vestibules of blue and white checked marble. The Major crept softly up the steps of one, and applied his key under the silverplated knob.

It wouldn't fit. This certainly could not be the house; moreover, he felt unpleasantly like a burglar, as he sneaked down the steps again.

He tried the second door, and then the third. Both obstinately declined to yield to the gentle persuasion of the key.

"This is beginning to get awkward," thought the perturbed Major, wiping the beady drops from his brow. "Suppose I should be obliged to spend the night out here, trying to get in! Besides if I'm not careful, I shall be arrested, and my first night for thirty years in my native land in the station house. I'll try one more door, and if that doesn't prove to be the right one, I'll go to the hotel."

He slipped the key into the keyhole; it revolved noislessly, and the door swung softly open on its polished hinges.

"The right one at last as I live!" chuckled the Major. "Furnished like the Governor General's, and all lighted up by Jove! That good hearted rascal Smith, means to give me a surprise. I see through it all now; but I don't intend to be surprised at anything after this."

He looked around. The gaslights were burning brightly in hall, reception room, and parlors; the soft, summer like atmosphere of a furnace dispel'ed all lingering idea of cold or wet; and there were groups of merry guests moving to and fro to the inspiring notes of a grand piano.

"Smith never told me a word of the place," thought Major Perkinson; "but it's a good idea—a capital idea. Called unexpectedly in the country, eh? Ah, he's a sly dog, is Smith."

He placed his dripping umbrella in the stand, and deliberately hung up his hat and overcoat on the elegant black walnut hall rack, and then he came and stood in the doorway, both hands serenely joined under his coat-tails, and a beaming smile upon his countenance, which showed all the white teeth to very good advantage.

"Goodness gracious!" exclaimed a portly lady, in black velvet—"Who is that in the doorway?"

"Aha," laughed Major Parkinson, complacently rubbing his hands; "you intended to surprise me, but you didn't after all. My dear madam, how do you do?"

"Sir, I don't know who you are," said the lady of black velvet, rather grimly, failing to recognize the Major's proffered hand.

"Dear me, aunt Rosa, chirped a younger lady—she certainly could not have been more than eighteen, and was as fresh and blooming as a rose bud—tripping forward, "Don't you see it's cousin John?"

The Major looked puzzled; but it would have been rude for him to back churlishly out, when such a ripe pair of cherry lips were put up for him to kiss, and such a dimpled pair of arms were around his capacious waist.

"I never knew that I had such a pretty cousin," was the Major's internal reflection; "but I dare say it's all right. Smith knows."

"And here's cousin George, and Stephen, and aunt Margaret, and her girls!" cried the cherry-lipped damsel eagerly pulling him forward.

Major Parkinson shook hands with them all round, feeling that he had just came into a large and unexpected inheritence of relations.

"I knew the Ghundaree would be in to night," cried one of the girls, clapping her hands. "We have been counting the days, Cousin John."

"The Ghundaree! Then I'm all right, after all, thought the perplexed Major. "I was beginning to think there might be some awkward mistake here, but the Ghundaree settles matters."

"Oh! and here's grandma!" exclaimed the irresistable cherry lips, dancing backward and forward like a pretty little Dervish. "Grandma, he's come! I knew he would be here to night. Come and speak to grandma, quick, John."

And the Major was pulled along by the sleeve of his coat toward a silver haired old lady, with a white lace cap, and a string of enormous gold beads round her shiveled throat.

"Well, John, I do declare!" cried grandma. "Who would have thought the climate of India would have changed you so? Why, you used to be tall and slim, like a beanpole; but I suppose its the hurricanes and earthquakes, and all that sort of thing that has settled you down so short and stout."

Major Perkinson did not know exactly what to say to this, so he shook the old lady's hand, saying:

"How do you find yourself this evening, ma'am?"

"And you haven't even asked after Clara—poor Clara!" chimed in the eighteen year old girl.

"Oh, ah, pardon me!" stammered our hero. "I was just going to inquire after Clara."

The lass with the cherry lips, beckoned to a tall, graceful girl in the bay-window, not exactly young, but still passing pleasant to look upon, with large gray eyes and soft, drooping curls of glossy brown.

"Clara!" she cried. 'Come! haven't you a word of welcome for cousin John?'

But the graceful girl shrank back, blushing and confused.

"Don't mind her!" said the other one, in an undertone.

"No I won't," said the Major.

"She'll be all right presently."

"I dare say she will!" answered our hero.

"But it is such nonsense!" went on the elf, whom the matrons addressed as "Grace." "Now, Clara, you know who it is, when you are to be married to him in less than a week!"

"Oho! This was beginning to grow a little serious.

Married! In less than a week! He, Major John Parkinson, who had lived a life of contended celibacy for five and forty years!

In spite of his resolution not to allow himself to be surprised, the Major felt the sensation rapidly creeping over him, not only of surprise, but also a species of dismay! Married! He blushed more vividly than Clara's self.

Surely it was time for an explanation now; and he was just opening his lips, when Grace whirled him round, standing on tiptoe to whisper, knowingly in his ear:

"Don't you want to see the wedding cake, cousin John? and the wreath? and the vail?"

Without waiting for an answer, she tiptoed him into another room, pulling him along by the coat tail.

It was very embarrassing, to be sure but then how pleasant it was!

The vail was a heap of snowy lace, like a cloud of vapor, the wreath was all orange blossoms, woven in with tiny green buds, but the cake! The cake was a miniature mountain of icing, and frosted flowers and cupids, chiseled in sparkling white sugar clinging round the bouquet of white flowers on the crest.

"Only think of it," said Grace, a little thoughtfully, as she pulled an orange blossom into its place in the chaplet, "to have the wedding day so near, after an engagement of fifteen years! Oh, cousin John, you ought to be a very happy man!"

"I will explain! thought the bewildered Major, breaking into a cold perspiration! "Yes," he began, aloud "but I—"

"You'll show me the ring, won't you?" coaxed Grace, as if with a sudden thought. "That's a darling! for of course you have got it in your vest pocket. And what have you brought for Clara? An India shawl, of course; and I hope it's very, very splendid, for there is nothing in all the world too good for our Clara."

"Grace," said the Major confidentially, taking her hand in his, "I want to tell you something. It's very awkward, but it isn't really my fault, and I'm sure you'll forgive me, when you come to hear how entirely I have been the victim of circumstances."

Grace's blue eyes grew big; her cherry lips parted—what could it be?

"Well," she ejaculated breathlessly.

"I'm not cousin John at all!" said the Major, with a jerk. "It's a mistake! I'm Parkinson!"

"You—are—not—John—Milward!"

"No, I'm nothing of the sort," said our Major, visibly brightening up. "But I knew John Milward very well. I came over with him in the Ghundaree, and if he's your cousin John, you've got a splendid fellow for a cousin!"

And then the Major told Grace just exactly how it all happened, and she blushed and laughed, and wondered how they could all have been so stupid, and confessed that "after all, she didn't think he had been, so very much to blame!"

"Except that you oughn't to have kissed me back so heartily," Grace added maliciously.

"I won't next time," said the Major humbly.

"But fifteen years in India—it would of course alter any one so completely," she said; "and what can have become of the real John?"

She conducted him back to the parlor, where he made his excuses as fluently as he could. Grandma was a little inclined to be offended at first, and Stephen, a muscular young man, muttered some half-inaudible words about punching the Major's head for him. But fuller explanations restored a friendly feeling once more, and the pater-familias, sensible man, insisted on the Major remaining.

"For if you are not our cousin John, you came over in the same steamer with him, and that ought to insure you a welcome," he said cheerily. "So sit down, sit down, Major. You are the rich East India nabob, then, who has bought the house next door? We've teased Gracie a good deal about setting her cap for the new neighbor, haven't we, Gracie?"

"Papa!" remonstrated Gracie, coloring up as bright a scarlet as a flamingo's wing!

"I'm glad to make your acquaintance, went on the comfortable old gentleman, "even if the manner isn't quite so formal as etiqutte books insist on! My name is Corey—Peter Corey—and now let me introduce you to our family circle and friends!"

So in less than five minutes, the Major entirely set free from the trammels of his false position, was made cordially at home, in the merry party, and exceedingly sung and jolly he found it!"

Presently a ring at the door-bell announced a new arrival, and the real genuine cousin John rushed in, all aglow with his rapid walk, and dripping from head to foot with rain drops.

"Had no end of trouble at the custom house with my luggage—couldn't come a second sooner!" he explained, hugging grandma and Clara, and Grace all at once, with two or three little ones swarming over his back and legs the while! "Why, halloa! Maj. Parkinson, how the deuce came you here?" Then of course ensued a third edition of explanations and comments, and then they were merrier than ever.

"Of, course the Major will stay here," cried Mr. Corey, when finally his guest made a move to go. "To-night at least!"

"He must do as he pleases," said that young lady demurely.

"Yes," said the Major, "I will." And he got down again.

Maj. Parkinson attended the wedding the next week, and he helped to decorate the drawing-room with flowers, and he carried chairs back and forth, and went on errands, losing himself, invariably, on the way, and he sent the bride a solid silver tea-service, and altogether he made himself so useful that Mrs. Corey said, feelingly:

"What should we have done without that dear Major?"

Grace, the gypsy, insisted on calling him cousin John just the same as ever; but from all appearance there will be another wedding before the year is out in the Corey family, and Major Parkinson's brown stone house will be graced by a mistress who was first seen by the Major IN THE WRONG HOUSE.

Medical.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseasses of the Throat and Lungs, Such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to cold and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral, they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in nowise injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of agueine. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgements we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either residence in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the Ague Cure daily.

For Liver Complaints, arise from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN.

BELLEFONTE, PA.

Wednesday Morning, Nov'ber 15, 1871.

FURNITURE at O'Bryan's, at Philadelphia prices.

FACT.—John Letterman has created quite a sensation in Milesburg by selling goods exceedingly cheap. See advertisement.

LOST.—Notice is hereby given that a Gas Certificate No. 95, dated march 3d, 1869, issued by the Bellefonte Gas Co., in the name of James Hillibish, has been lost. A new cut has been applied for.

BUTCHERING.—John Wolf, of the firm of Wm. S. Wolf & Sons, is not only a good tinner, but he is a most excellent butcher. He requests us to say, that persons wishing to employ him as a butcher must apply soon.

LOGAN No. 1.—The members of the Logan Fire Company, are hereby notified that the regular meeting for the nomination of officers, will be held on next Friday evening, at the Hose house. All are requested to be present.

WELCOME.—Our young friend Cyrus L. Gordon, Esq., Law partner of Judge M'Namare, in Clearfield, Pa., paid our Sanctum a visit on Monday last. Cyrus is looking finely and is destined to make a big mark in Clearfield. Go on Cyrus the brave are sure to win.

LINN & WILSON.—These gentlemen at their excellent Drug Store on Allegheny st., have just received another large and superior lot of toilet soaps, brushes, perfumery, fresh drugs. &c., &c. Clerks are accomodating. Prescriptions prepared with the greatest care.

ROUND HOUSE.—The new Round House being erected by the B. & S. S. R. R. Co., in this place will soon be completed. They are now at work slating the roof. Wm. H Smith, of Unionville, a good man and first rate mechanic has charge of the carpenterwork.

BIG HOGS.—J. M. Wagner & Co., Proprietors, of the lower Mill, have a pen full of fine large hogs. They are fat and slick, perfect beauties in their way. By the way let us remark that Wagner & Co., are among the heavies grain dealers in the County, and are always ready to pay the cash.

BEAT THAT.—Frederick Decker, Esq., a skillful and enterprising farmer of Harris township, sent us a few days since, two of the largest turnips we have ever seen. The largest weighed nine pounds. When cut it was perfectly sound, and when cooked was sweet and good as a small turnip. Who can beat Fred. raising turnips?

LIST of Letters remaining in the Post Office, and unclaimed, Nov 13, 1871:

Mrs Mary Andrs John C Crawford, Mrs Emaline Crook, E P Deane Lewis W Dunkle, Mrs Harri t Franklin, D H Fe ebrock, Mrs Beli Garbrick, Phillip Gross, Wm Gehret, Miss Mary A Gilbert, Mrs Minta Hoover, Miss Molly Hess, S G Hall, Peter Hockman—2. Ed Janson, Tim Kelley, David Kauffman, James Morrow, Wm Myers, James McElroy, Agnes Ross, Rev Wm Schock—5, Rachael Sunstine, Esther A Saylor, Michael Segner, J J Sten, W D Stover, Miss Jeithe Stover, John R Shaver, David Tanyer, John Ulmer, Wilson Williams, John S Walker, Jos N Weaver,

POTATOES.—Hugh Glenn, Esq., a scientific farmer and a good Republican, a resident of Huston township planted last spring about 1-4 of an acre of ground in potatoes. From this he raised 87 bushels of potatoes. They were all large, and said to be the finest ever raised in that township. He weighed some of these potatoes, the heaviest one weighing 3½ pounds. This is no exaggeration. Who will send in the next report?

FURNITURE.—Messrs. Shroyer & Son at their large ware-rooms in the Bush House, continue to sell furniture of all styles and finish at reduced prices. They manufacture the greater part of the furniture they sell and are therefore prepared to warrant it. They say they are determined not to be undersold, and extend an invitation to the people of the county to call and examine their work, before purchasing. See advertisement in another column of the REPUBLICAN.

CLOTHING.—Messrs Sussman & Guggenhimer, requests us to say, that to their already large and well selected stock of dry goods, Groceries, Leather, Seed &c., they have added the largest and finest assortment of Clothing both for men and boys ever brought to this town. Mr. Sussman, has done business in this county for many years and knows just what the people need. The firm is a good one strong and reliable and determined to please their customers. Prices for clothing remarkably low. See advertisement.

CHICAGO, October 26th, 1871.

JOHN HAMILTON, Esq., Agricultural College, Centre county, Pa; Dear Sir:—Your favor of 23d inst., to the Mayor of Chicago, enclosing check for three hundred and eighty five dollars, ($385) subscribed by the citizens of Harris twp., for the relief of sufferers by the late disastrous fire, in the city, has been duly received.

By proclamation of the Mayor, copy of which is enclosed, you will observe that the work of receiving and distributing contributions, has been confided to the care of the society.

Be pleased to accept yourself, and convey to those generous citizens who joined you in this noble work, the most grateful thanks of afflicted people for this timely assistance, and for your kind expressions of sympathy.

Yours, very truly,
GEO. M. PULLMAN.
Treas. Chicago Relief and aid Society,
Per C. G. HAMMOND.

FIRE.—About half past 10 o'clock on Sunday night last, fire was discovered in St. John's Catholic church, in this place. There had been divine service in the church in the evening and also in the morning. The evening service closed about 8 o'clock, and the congregation had returned home, all no doubt feeling that the church, at least, was secure. Not so, however. Mr. Sands, the enterprising baker, at the hour above named, seeing a bright light in the church, and feeling confident that all was not right gave the alarm of fire. About the same time it was discovered by Father McIlvain, who also gave the alarm. Soon the fire companies were on the ground, the Logan getting there first secured the nearest fire plug, and threw the first water. The Undine it is but just to say are not yet fully organized. It is but a few week's since they obtained their carriage and hose and these, for the reason that their hose house is not yet finished, they have been compelled to keep in a stable, on an alley in the rear of the Brockerhoff House. This was so blocked with wagons, that it was impossible to get their carriage until the wagons were all removed. The Undine did good execution after it did arrive; but the credit of extinguishing this fire must be given to the "Logan boys." The Logan is a good company, and the Undine boys will have to be wide awake if they beat it at, or to a fire. With a company like the Logan, and a company such as we anticipate the Undine to be after fully organized, the citizens of Bellefonte, may rest with a feeling of deep security from the damages inflicted by the devouring element. It shou'd be the pleasure, as it is emphatically, the duty of each and every citizen, to give liberally of his means to fully equip, sustain and encourage these companies. While we are giving liberally to the suffering in Chicago and in Wisconsin, &c., let us not forget that we owe a duty to ourselves, to protect our own and those of our own households. One word of caution. Every House-keeper, or those having shops or offices should see that their heaters, stoves, pipes, &c, are all secure and in good order. Nine tenths of all the fires we believe result from defective flues, heaters, or in a word from carelessness. The fire in St. John's Church originated from the heater. The church was not much damaged; but it is a miracle that it was saved at all.

COFFINS of all styles and prices, ready made, at O'Bryan's cheap furniture store.

NOBLE WORKERS.—In the last campaign in this county, we are free to acknowledge the important services of Gen. Theodore Gregg, J. G. Johnston, R. B. Kinnie and D. S. Keller. These gentlemen were faithful and energetic. They were not idle a day from the time they reported to us as a member of the State Central Committee until the polls closed on October 10th. D. S. Keller's mission, was Pennsvally and while he performed his duty manfully there: Gen. Theodore Gregg, R. B. Kinnie and J. G. Johnston, were canvassing Bald Eagle valley, speaking in every school house by night and traveling from house to house by day, doing all that men could do, in a righteous cause to bring success, victory, triumph. These gentlemen did us noble service in holding meetings to arouse the enthusiasm of our people and in getting out the vote.

We have been beaten in Centre county since 1860. That year President Lincoln carried this county by over 600 majority. In 1861 we were beaten, because we sent over 1700 Republicans into the Army to battle for the Union—for the life of the nation. From that day to this we have never carried the county, simply because the bones of the Republicans lie bleaching upon Southern soil, or have been gathered since the war by our glorious government into the National Cemeteries. If these noble heroes were alive and home to-day Centre county would be Republican by 1000 majority. The patriots went to the war, went to the front to battle against slavery and the enemies of Liberty; while the fogies—the friends of slavery—the enemies of "equal and exact justice to all men;" remained at home to keep up a constant fire "in the rear" of the "Boys in Blue."

We have never carried this county since 1860. Last year P. G. Meek had 714 majority. This year that same P. G. Meek has only 386 majority. For this result we are indebted first, to the untiring industry of E. M. Blanchard, chairman of the Executive County Committee and his home guard and second to General Theodore Gregg, J. G. Johnston, R. B. Kinnie and D. S. Keller, of Washington City, D. C., who worked night and day for our success.

SMALL POX.—The Pittsburgh Chronicle in noticing an instance illustrating the manner in which the disease is propagated and encouraged, relates the following: A man, the father of five children, persistently refused to have them vaccinated. Recently the five children all fell victims to the small pox. One of them died yesterday, another cannot live, and the other three are dangerously sick. Prompt vaccination seems to be the only sure preventive, and it behooves each and every one to look out for himself that far. Then he need feel no fear.

VISIT TO DICKINSON SEMINARY, LOCATED AT WILLIAMSPORT, PA.—I call it a visit for such it really proved. Although the trip was designed for the transaction of business, which would require but a few minutes. So pleasantly did the time pass and so attractive were the surroundings that the entire day was spent within it walls. I imagined I had outgrown all the attractions which cluster about the school room, and possibly I have, for such as "fond memory brings to light" of my school room experience, but here I came in contact with a social feature of education entirely unexpected, a feature which partakes so largely of the influence and tendencies of the home circle, that all my prejudice against boarding schools were overcome and I felt no apprehensions for the welfare of our oldest boy.

As I associated with the students in their chapel exercises, in their rooms and during the hours of recreation, witnessing such uniform kindness among all, in their intercourse with each other, and the special attention bestowed upon the newly arrived—not the "hazing" attentions of West Point and many other of our educational institutions throughout the country, which seek only to victimize, the more successfully, each new student; but attentions bearing the unmistakable marks of gentlemanly training, purity of purpose and chastity of language—that I felt secure in resigning this secret trust to their influence.

Reaching the Seminary in the morning, we were invited to breakfast. The students had just left the table, therefore we were deprived the pleasure of their company during the morning meal. But if the beef steak, bread, potatoes, &c., set before us, be a true index of the manner in which they are served, there certainly is a disposition on the part of the managers of the institution, to render a full equivolent for the three dollars and eighty cents per week, charged for board, room and washing. The forenoon passed so pleasantly and swiftly, in visiting the society rooms, scanning the quite extensive libraries of the Belles-Letters and Gamma Epsilon societies, making the acquaintance of the students and ascertaining the workings of the various departments of the institution, that ere we were aware of the fleetness of time, the gong admonished us of the fact that we had not yet registered our name at the Hotel. We at once took our departure, but were headed off at the door by the gentlemanly Steward, Mr. Richards, and informed that one of the standing rules of the institution is, that all patrons of the school from abroad, while in the city, were expected to remain with their children, not only to inspect their rooms and become acquainted with the sanitary measures of the Seminary but sit at the table with them experience their fare and witness their associations. Regarding these as important to parents sending their children, for the first time, from home, I readily complied with the requirements.

I was assigned a position at the table, which enabled me to observe the students enter the spacious Dining Hall, the young men by one door and the young ladies by the opposite. The Professors took their places at the head of the tables, with their families around them, the balance of the tables being occupied by the students. The girls and boys seated promiscuously, presented more the appearance of a family re-union than of a boarding school. Especially agreeable was the tone of conversation and the manifestations of kind regard for each others welfare everywhere visible about the tables. All are required to remain the full half hour at each meal, which in our judgement is a most excellent arrangement in view of its social effects upon the young people. The commendable object and aim of the faculty is evidently to dispel from the mind of the student the fact that he has left his home, and to keep warm his affections for relations which find existence only about the hearth of the well regulated family. Our stay in the institution was brief, but making the best possible use of our opportunity, we feel assured of perfect safety in commending to all parents, who have children to educate, the Seminery to which we have committed our own son.

G. M.

INSURANCE.—Anderson & Hale, as we stated in a former number have been appointed agents for the Liverpool, London and Globe Insurance Company. They are industrious, energetic and worthy young men and like the company they represent deserve the confidence of the entire community. From a pamphlet in our possession we make the following extract:

"Great in wealth and responsibility the Liverpool, London and Globe can afford to be great in losses. After paying all its Chicago claims it will have millions left in its net surplus alone. The Chicago loss is less than $2,750,000, and about equal to one year's American revenue. To avoid any possible sacrifice of the American securities held by the company, the New York board of directors are authorized to draw on London for the prompt settlement of all losses as soon as properly adjusted."

LADIES' and Children's Fancy Furs, at John Fareira's Popular Fur Emporium, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia. His stock of Fancy Furs for Ladies' and Children is very large, and no one can fail to be suited.

RESPONSIBLE FOR UNSAFE BRIDGES.—In 1866 a teamster employed by Michael H. Moore, of Lancaster county, drove over the bridge in Rapho and West Hampfield twp., that county, and the team broke through, killing a horse and breaking the wagon. Suit was instituted. The court charged that the townships were liable—the question being referred to the jury. The jury found $378 03 for the plaintiff. On a suit of error to the supreme court the judgment below was affirmed and the liabilities and duties of supervisors were thus defined:

1. Bridges are treated as portions of the highways which cross them, and are to be maintained and kept in repair by the supervisors of the township.

2. The neglect of the supervisors to keep them in repair, subjects them to a personal liability; but does not lessen the primary liability of the townships to those who suffer injury from their neglect.

3. What is negligence must depend upon the peculiar circumstances of each other and is a question for the jury.

4. Great danger demands higher vigilance and more effectual means to secure safety.

5. Applying these principles here it may be asked, what structure more important in view of the safety of life and property, can be well imagined than such a bridge as this, having a span of fifty-two feet, crossing from ten to twelve feet above the stream, whose water is middle deep. The accident itself is evidence of its important character. The plaintiff's wagon was overturned in the fall, the body crushed, the load of wheat fell underneath it into the stream and one of the horses was killed. As remarked by our brother Read—"a bridge looks fair till it breaks down—it is not like a pit which you can see and avoid." In practice, it is used up to the last moment. Hence such a structure demands constant vigilance to guard and preserve it. Therefore when a bridge is old, having stood for the length of time the timbers composing it are accustomed to last, and when it may be reasonably expected that decay has set in, it is negligence to omit all proper precautions to ascertain its true condition. Nor will mere appearances in such a case excuse the neglect. It is a matter of common knowledge that invisible defects may, and under such circumstances, probably do exist—that either wet or dry rot may have set in and not be visible, and therefore should be sought for. But no one of ordinary intelligence would think of seeking for an unsound and invisible defect by merely inspecting the surface of the wood. This being the case, it is clearly the duty of the supervisors, having thus reason to believe that defects may exist, to call to their assistance those whose skill will enable them to ascertain the true state of the structure, and determine the question of its safety. Without doing this much at least, their duty to the public is not performed; not to do it, is therefore negligence, and this is the point on which the case went to the jury. There is, therefore, no error in the submission.

HONOR TO WHOM, &c.

It affords us pleasure to take a retrospective view of the last campaign in this county, and see that as the result of earnest energetic work the vote of P. G. Meek, was cut down from 714 in 1870 to 386 in 1871. We have before stated that our whole ticket would have been elected if every Republican had performed his duty. But there can be no dereliction of duty charged upon the Chairman of our County Executive Committee—E. M. Blanchard, Esq. Just so soon as he was appointed to fill that important position, he went to work with an energy and zeal worthy the cause and the man. He resolved that every honorable means should be used to carry our county ticket. To this end he gathered around him every man in town or country who was willing to work and instilled into them a portion of his own energy—his own enthusiasm. The committees were urged to do their whole duty. Documents were distributed and letters written. Republican Lawyers were all urged into the canvass, and we are happy to say all responded with a will. W. P. Wilson, J. G. Love, Geo. M. Yocum, Edmund Blanchard, S. D. Gray, A. O. Furst, Esqs., and Gen. James A. Beaver, all entered the campaign with zeal, working shoulder to shoulder for the success of the ticket as they scarcely ever worked before. All this, we think, from the noble example set them by our Chairman E. M. Blanchard.

We did a good and great work, the credit of which, in our humble opinion, is due our indefatigable Chairman. He has shown not only that he is energetic, but a good organizer. We have had many good Chairmen who did their duty faithfully; but their peer is E. M. Blanchard, Esq. One more such campaign, and the redemption of old Centre will be a fixed fact—the six mills tax reduced and the actions of the Ring exposed—written in characters of living light, high up upon the pillars of the Court House, so plain that the "wayfaring man though a fool" cannot fail to read them.

NEW STORE.—We stated last week that Messrs Cook & Creamer, were about to open a store in Milesburg. It turns out to be a mistake. It was not however, our mistake. These excellent young men, full of enterprise as they are, failing to obtain a room in the above named place resolved at once to go to Oak Hall. The choice we think wise, the locality a good one, and the people of Harris, Ferguson and the surrounding twps., we have no doubt will appreciate the enterprise of these young men by bestowing upon them a liberal patronage.

A big tannery is being erected at Ridgway, Elk county.

THE PERFECT MAN—OPINIONS EXPRESSED.

"The Perfect Man, or Jesus an Example of Godly Life." By Rev. Harry Jones. 16mo. Price, $1.25. This little reprint is a diamond of the finest water. We hesitate to say that it is composed of a few sermons, lest we may keep anybody from reading it.

"The Christian teaching of a noble, cultured nature, has rarely, if ever, been put into such sweet pure English as runs like a pebbly brook through this timely volume. In every chapter there is a wealth of clearly-defined, and heart-searching suggestions, put in a natural, direct and manly way, which is as different from official and technical utterance, as a meadow from an album of dried grasses. We hope that the little volume which treats so tenderly and wisely of Jesus an Example of Godly Life, will win, as it deserves, a large and grateful audience."—Christian Union.

THE PERFECT MAN; or Jesus an Example of Godly Life. By the Rev. Harry Jones. Boston: D. Lothrop & Co., 38 and 40 Cornhill.

"We have read this little book with intense satisfaction. It is full of profound thoughts clothed in chaste, simple language. It is not commonplace homilies got up to sell, but an original, vigorous, excellent work. We prize it highly, and commend it without reserve."—Central Christian Advocate—St. Louis.

THE PERFECT MAN; or Jesus an Example of Godly Life. By the Rev. Harry Jones. D. Lothrop & Co., Boston.

"The author accepting as true the doctrine of Christ's divinity and atonement, confines himself to those aspects of his character and relations that exhibit his human side, and made him an example of a truly godly man for the imitation of his people. Mr. Jones is a racy, vigorous and suggestive writer, and a clear thinker. The book is one that will be highly prized by both ministers and laymen. No one can read it without feeling a stronger desire to be more like Him who clothed Himself in the habiliments of flesh, that he might be the saviour of mankind."—Christian Intelligencer.

Important to Authors.

Mrs. D. Lothorp & Co., Boston, announce that MMS. for a S. S. Book for the Premium of $1,000, will be received until March 15, 1872, and offer an additional prize of $500 for the next best MS.

Messrs. D. Lothorp & Co., of Boston, are still adding to the already large number of their publications, the success of which shows that they have been fortunate enough to anticipate and to meet the want of a large class of the Christian community. The eight volumes of original $500 prize stories and their ten volumes of new prize series, are commended as something especially excellent; a leading religious journal heralds their appearance as marking a new era in the history of the juvenile literature. Their Shell Cove Series, Talbury Girls' Library, Pro and Con Series, Crown Jewel Library, the Sunny Dell Series, Little Bea Haddon Series, and Homespun Library, are considered to be among the best of their class.

Messrs. D. Lothorp & Co. also issue very desirable editions of imitations of Christ, Holy Living, Holy Dying, Mind and Words of Jesus, and Faithful Promise, Morning and Night Watches, at 75 cents per volume; Pilgrim's Progress, at prices varying from 25 cents to $7 50; The Rock of Ages, by Rev. S. F. Smith, price $1,50; and Hours of Christian Devotion, by Trowbridge, price $2.00. Of the Romances of Ridgemont, an elegant $1,50 volume just issued, Rev. Dr. Day says: "It is full of zest, spirit, freshness, and character." Rev. Dr. Lincoln writes: "It has a freshness like the morning air, and sparkles like the dew drop in the sun." Tried in the Fire, Olive Loring's Mission, Daisy Seymour, and the Torch Bearers, $1,25 each. A Story of Four Lives, and This one Thing I Do, price $1,50 each, are just ready, and are very elegant volumes, conveying valuable lessons for all. The same may be said of all of D. Lothorp & Co's publications. I would be well for those who contemplate buying books for their families to send to this energetic firm for their catalogue, and from this selections can be made with ease, and with confidence that none but good books are on the list.—Boston Daily Advertiser.

Don't fail to read the two elegant prize books—Short Comings and Long-Goings, price $1,25; Late Falconer; price $1,50. They are all full of life. The publishers, D Lothorp & Co., Boston, send books, postage paid, on receipt of price.

DESERVING OF HOME SUPPORT.—We are just in receipt of the November Number of the new illustrated Pittsburg paper—The People's Monthly—gotten up with special reference to the industrial classes. We can safely and cordially recommend this popular Monthly to our readers, as a pure, bright, cheery, and wholesome family paper, containing a large quantity of useful and entertaining; original matter. This number has some most beautiful illustrations—notably the two centre pieces—a young maid contemplating herself in a stream—"Natur's looking glass;" another feeding some tame pigeons; a touching illustrated poem called "Teddy's Letter, &c., &c. Cheap homes, and house plans, and useful household information are made a specialty of. The Pittsburg, as well as the Eastern press, are hearty in their commendation of this Monthly, and as the subscription only amounts to a dollar and a half a year, and a new year is approaching, all our readers who can, should take it to their homes. It is especially edifying and interesting to youth. Address, "PEOPLE'S MONTHLY," No. 86 Fifth Avenue, Pittsburg. It is exceedingly popular in the Pittsburg district; so there is no risk of any subscriber being disappointed.

THE CHRISTIAN WEEKLY.—The question 'how he was to live" was a "Knotty Question" to the poor street sweeper, and the "Illustrated Christian Weekly" of October 21st has ably illustrated his perplexities. The "Grain Fleet in New York," "Bethany Sunday-school" at Philadelphia, the "Sacred Bambino" at Rome, and a story showing the power of kindness over animals, are the other subjects of illustrations.

The second three months' numbers of this paper are now ready, bound in paper covers, and will be sent by mail postpaid on the receipt of sixty cents. Address at 150 Nassau-street, New York.

ANOTHER PUZZLE:—

A young man asked his sweetheart's age;
She thus replied, both grave and sage,
"Six times seven and seven times three
Add to my age, the sum will be
As much above six times and four,
As twice my age exceeds a score."

What was her age?

LAST week 1,770,000 feet of lumber was shipped from Lock Haven by canal and rail.

FOR SALE.—The splendid mill property known as "Oak Hall," situate in Harris township, this county is now offered for sale. For full particulars as to price and terms inquire at the office of the Bellefonte REPUBLICAN. 43 tf
